The Harvards and Oxonians—Their Practice Yesterday—Speculations Regarding the Result.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The Harvard four were out this morning in ELLIOT'S boat. They were steered this time by a stranger, who was weighed up to the standard of their coxswain BURNHAM. The performance of the new boat was generally satisfactory. It is thought that the crew are more formidable opponents in this than in any other craft which they have tried. They started with eight-stroke per minute, and went to Hammersmith Bridge and back. In the evening the Harvard and Oxford crews both rowed over the entire course from Putney to Mortlake, the latter making the distance in thirteen seconds less time than the Harvards.

The opinion is generally entertained by Englishmen that Oxford must win. But the appearance of the crews hardly warrants the assertion that either is superior to the other. The result will mainly depend on the skill of the coxswain and his perfect knowledge of the course. If the boats are well steered from the soap works through Hammersmith Bridge and past All Island, and all then well together, the result will depend entirely on muscular force. The betting is two to one on Oxford.

Rear-Admiral HENRY CHADE has been appointed to the command of the English Pacific Squadron, vice Admiral GEORGE F. HASTINGS.

The European Grain Crop—Favorable Reports.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—A great mass of details concerning the condition and promise of the growing grain crops has recently been published. It seems to be the general impression that the continuance of the late dry and cool weather has been of immense service to the country. Much of the corn has been already gathered, and another fortnight like the past, and the crisis of the harvest will be over. The copious rains which fell some time ago, though they delayed, did not damage the corn.

The favorable change in the weather stopped the advance in the prices of all sorts of corn; but great fluctuations are still expected, as the crops throughout Europe, with the exception of those in the interior of Russia, promise to be light.

The weather throughout England is fair.

CUBA.

The Question of the Cession of the Island to the United States—Views of an English Journal.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The Daily Telegraph (Liberal) in an editorial to-day, says: "If Cuba severed her connection with Spain, it would only be to form a new bond with the United States. England could feel no jealousy at an aggrandizement which would complete the abolition of slavery as an institution. The loss of Cuba to Spain would be an unquestionable gain to the mother country, the colony and the cause of mankind."

Large Fire in Philadelphia—The Loss $1,000,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—At 2 o'clock this afternoon a fire broke out in the large four-story brick building on the northwest corner of Ninth and Wallace streets, used for manufacturing purposes, which, in a short time, was completely destroyed. The building was worth $80,000, and insured for most its value. The occupants, D. & W. KING, woolen and yarn manufacturers, have an insurance of $18,000, which covers their loss; J. & J. STEAD, same business, loss $8,000; insurance, $4,500. J. O. MEAD & Co., silver-ware manufacturers, suffer a heavy loss. Four private dwellings were burned. The total loss will probably reach $100,000.

MURDER IN PHILADELPHIA.

An Old Man Shot and Killed by his Resident Son—Full Particulars.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—Early this morning Mr. THOMAS L. EVANS, aged 63 years, was killed by his son, MARSHALL H. EVANS, at the house of Mrs. BELSHAW, No. 202 South Tenth-street. The house is occupied in part by the family of Mr. EVANS. The family were assembled at breakfast and had entered into a general discussion of the strange behavior of MARSHALL EVANS for some time past, and they had determined that the father, after breakfast, should visit the family physician, Dr. VAN DYKE, who had expressed his conviction that the son was insane and had better be sent to an asylum, in order to procure from the doctor a certificate of the son's mental condition, on which he could be removed to an asylum. Just as the conversation was concluded MARSHALL came into the breakfast-room and took his seat at the table. His father bade him good morning, but he made no reply to this salutation, and it was suspected by all present that he had overheard the conversation. He ate heartily, and while he was thus engaged his father left the room to change his dressing-gown for a coat, and procuring his hat, Mr. EVANS started down the front stairway. In the meantime MARSHALL had stepped out into the hall. Here he paced up and down, stopping occasionally at the bottom of the stairway to look up. On his father reaching the hall landing, MARSHALL walked toward the front door, and as the father was stepping into the vestibule the son drew a revolver and fired three shots in rapid succession. The father then retreated through the parlors to the hall again, and back toward the dining-room. In passing the pantry he clutched at the door, and then fell into the arms of Mrs. BELSHAW. She laid him on the floor. MARSHALL followed his father all the way back, and as the body was lying on the floor he bent over it, but said nothing. Mrs. BELSHAW remarked to him, "MARSHALL, see what you have done," to which he made no answer. The young ladies, hearing the shots, and seeing MARSHALL with a pistol in his hand, ran away shrieking, and the alarm brought assistance from the street, when MARSHALL was taken into custody. On being questioned, he replied, "I don't feel right." The father died soon after the firing of the shots.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24—Evening.—Young EVANS is 26 years of age. He has been afflicted with rheumatism for many years. Recently he has behaved in a frantic manner toward his wife, threatening her life. They were living at Riverside, N. J. He came to this city yesterday, followed by his wife, and on reaching his father's house behaved strangely. During the night he threatened his father with a knife. After the father got up this morning the son got possession of a pistol which was given to him by the former as a present years ago. This was the weapon used in the tragedy. The scene of the homicide is very near that of the Twitchell murder.

Murder in the White Mountains.

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 24.—A dispatch from the Crawford House, on the White Mountains, states that on Sunday afternoon GEORGE ABBOTT, of Jackson, and FRANK DOLLOFF, of Bartlett, who had hitherto been friends, got into a quarrel while under the influence of liquor, and about 6 P. M. ABBOTT went to DOLLOFF'S house and demanded admission, but was warned off by DOLLOFF. About 11 P. M. ABBOTT returned with another man and swore that he would break into the house if the door was not opened. DOLLOFF again warned off the intruder and threatened to shoot him if he attempted to force an entrance. ABBOTT then proceeded to break down the door, and upon its falling he sprang into the room and was instantly shot dead by DOLLOFF. The gun was held so near him that his clothes were partially burned by the flash. It is reported that DOLLOFF is in custody.

Another Murder by a Smuggler's Clerk—The Case of Mr. Norton in Boston.

BOSTON, Aug. 24.—The Coroner's jury in the case of THOMAS NORTON, who died on Friday, returned a verdict that his death was caused by laudanum, sold to him for tincture of rhubarb by WM. J. SAVILLE, an apothecary's clerk, at No. 1,287 Washington-street, and that the act of the clerk was in violation of the rules of the store, which forbade the clerk to put up prescriptions.

Ex-Ministers McMahon and Worthington—Reported Harsh Treatment of the Former.

PARIS, Aug. 24.—The late American Ministers to South America, General McMAHON, from Paraguay, and Mr. WORTHINGTON, from Buenos Ayres, are expected here, on their way to the United States. It is reported when Minister McMAHON approached the lines of the Allies, on his return from President LOPEZ'S headquarters, he was badly received by the Brazilians. His escort, bearing a white flag, was attacked by some cavalry, although the Count D'EU had notified the army of the expected arrival of the Minister.

SWEETSER, of New-York, preaches at the Universalist Church this evening. To-morrow evening there will be a discourse preached at Washington Hall.

Indignation of Buffalo Printers.

BUFFALO, Aug. 24.—Much indignation has been created among the printers of this city at the reported charge to the Grand Jury at Erie, Penn., yesterday, by Judge VINCENT in the case of the Erie Republican vs. the Typographical Union. The charge is considered as unfair and one-sided that funds will be raised here to assist the Erie printers to test the case.

The Recent Revolt at Sing Sing—Meeting of the Prison Inspectors.

ALBANY, Aug. 24.—The Inspectors of State Prisons held a consultation with a committee from the Prison Association to-day as to the proper mode of punishing refractory convicts, in view of the recent revolt at Sing Sing. A desultory conversation took place, and various methods of punishment were suggested; but without taking any definite action on the subject, the meeting was adjourned until October, when it will be held at Sing Sing.

The Board of Canal Commissioners leave here to-morrow on the steam canal packet Louis Lorraine, to inspect the State canals.

GETTYSBURG.

The Officers' Reunion—Survey of the Battle-Field—Interesting Points Marked—The Company Present.

GETTYSBURG, Penn., Aug. 24.—This morning, at a meeting of officers, Colonel BACHELDER was invited to take charge of the exercises of the day. After the meeting the party repaired to the field, for the purpose of definitely fixing the positions of the troops in the first day's battle. Among those who composed the party were Generals MEREDITH, DANA, ROBINSON, LEONARD, FOWLER, COLTER, and HOFFMAN; and Colonels HEIM, COOPER, DUDLEY, SHAWEN and LINDLAY, who were all participants in that fight; together with several members of the Battle-field Memorial Association, and a shorthand writer, who made copious notes of the conference. Many interesting incidents of the contest were related as the party passed from point to point. The roads by which the troops advanced and retired, and the positions where the opposing armies met, in connection with intervening incidents, were distinctly studied. The places where prominent officers fell, or were wounded, were designated. One of the most interesting points was the locality of General REYNOLDS' death, a tree with the letter "R" upon it, showing the place where he died. The opinion of General MEREDITH is that General REYNOLDS was wounded several rods northeast from this tree, as he was in the vicinity at the time with his Iron Brigade; but this will be fixed by members of his staff. Lieutenant TURTLE, of the Corps of Engineers, who at present has charge of the Government survey of the field, personally superintends the driving of the stakes to mark the various positions. The work to-day was confined to the ground covered by the troops in the first day's fight, including Seminary Ridge. The examination was conducted in a spirit of fairness, the desire being to settle the controverted points.

An accident happened to Colonel DUDLEY, one of the examining party. Having only one leg, he rode on horseback. The saddle-girth broke, and this threw him to the ground. He fell upon his back. Fortunately he sustained no injury.

In the afternoon the positions of the Eleventh Corps in the first day's engagement were determined. Among the party were Generals STEINWEHR and AMSBERG and Colonel ASHMANN and other officers. Judge HUMPHREY, of the Memorial Board, accompanied the party. Other parties repaired to various points of the field.

The only two Confederate officers present are Colonel HARRISON, Adjutant-General of PRYOR'S brigade, and Colonel ALLEN, of the Seventh Tennessee Regiment. General MANSFIELD sent a letter expressing profound regret that prior engagements would prevent his being present, and WALTER H. TAYLOR, late Adjutant on General ROBERT E. LEE'S staff, hoped it may be in his power to attend, but he might be prevented from doing so by private business.

General HANCOCK, in a letter dated St. Louis, Aug. 19, says he had just returned from the Plains, and regretted that it would not be possible to be at Gettysburg on the 26d inst., as it would be a great pleasure to meet so many of his old companions in arms. He was about to leave for St. Paul and the plains of Minnesota and Dakota, east of the Missouri River, on a tour of inspection of the military posts in that region, and he would not complete the service in less than a month.

Governor GEARY is accompanied by a part of his family, and other gentlemen have also brought ladies of their respective households hither. So far the company has been very pleasant, apart from the considerations which have induced so many persons of distinction to visit the field, now historic by their military services.

To-morrow Culp's Hill, Cemetery Hill and vicinity will be visited. The officers of the Eleventh and Twelfth Corps hold a meeting tonight to determine on a plan of operations to-morrow. On Wednesday evening there will be a ball at the Springs in honor of the military and invited guests. It is uncertain that General MEADE will be here.

Following are copies of the letters from Generals ROBERT E. LEE, FITZHUGH LEE and LONGSTREET:

GENERAL R. E. LEE'S LETTER.

LEXINGTON, Va., Aug. 1, 1869.

DEAR SIR: Absence from Lexington has prevented my receiving until to-day your letter of the 26th ult., inclosing an invitation from the Gettysburg Battle-field Memorial Association, to attend a meeting of the officers engaged in the battle of Gettysburg, for the purpose of marking upon the ground by enduring memorials of great the position and movements of the armies on the field. My engagements will not permit me to be present. I believe, if there, I could not add anything material to the information existing on the subject. I think it wiser, moreover, not to keep open the sores of war, but to follow the examples of those nations who endeavored to obliterate the marks of civil strife, to commit to oblivion the feelings it engendered.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
R. E. LEE.

FITZ-HUGH LEE'S LETTER.

RICHLAND, Stafford Co., Va., Aug. 14, 1869.

Hon. D. McConaughy, Secretary Gettysburg Battle-field Memorial Association:

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, through General R. E. LEE, of Lexington, of a hospitable invitation to be present at the "reunion" of the principal officers of the two armies that fought for the field of Gettysburg. It will not be in my power to be present at the time indicated, viz.: last week in August. My division of cavalry reached Gettysburg on the afternoon of the 3d July, 1863, was placed upon the left of our army, and fought with General WADE HAMPTON'S division, the whole being under the command of General J. E. B. STUART, General LEE'S Chief of Cavalry, at that time; fought during the 4d with the cavalry upon the right flank of the army, "struck out and the following (substituted) Federal brigadiers, HARRISON and I had been absent from the army with our cavalry from the time it left Virginia until the above time. Any information that I may possess on the subject matter of your communication will be cheerfully rendered. I rather think, though, and I write it in all kindness, Sir, that if the nation is to continue as a whole, it is better to forget and to forgive, rather than perpetuate in granite, records of its civil wars. Sincerely thanking you and your Association for the conciliatory spirit which prompted a courteous invitation.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
FITZ-HUGH LEE.

GENERAL LONGSTREET'S LETTER.

NEW-ORLEANS, La., Aug. 13, 1869.

DEAR SIR: Your interesting letter of the 30th ult., via Saratoga, is just received. A few days previous, I wrote to advise you that important affairs would detain me in the city during the season of your reunion. I had hoped to be able to meet my old comrades, but fairly had to the best mode of securing the assistance of the Southern gentlemen in marking the different points of the field, I can only answer for myself. Other persons, residents of this city, who were there, are now absent, or I should consult them and send you their views. I would be pleased to visit Gettysburg at any time, when I can leave New-Orleans, but do not think it possible for me to do so this year. I would prefer to make the visit with as many persons as can be gotten there, but if I can only do so by myself, I would prefer such a visit rather than none, if I would be likely to find some one there to assist me in marking the points and lines of the field.

I am, Sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JAMES LONGSTREET.

Bloody Proceedings in a Tennessee Town—The Trouble Between Whites and Negroes.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 24.—A difficulty occurred to-day between a negro and a white boy, in the village of Macon, Fayette County, in this State, resulting in a serious affray. A brother of the white boy interfered and punished the negro, whereupon a crowd of negroes gathered and threatened to sack the town. One negro was shot. The negroes in town were soon reinforced by parties from the surrounding country, and they made an indiscriminate attack upon the whites. The white boys who were in the original difficulty had to fly for safety. The Sheriff of the county was called upon and he started from Somerville with a posse comitatus to quell the disturbance. It is reported that several of the Sheriff's party have been wounded by the negroes.

A special to the Appeal says: "One white and several negroes were wounded, and one of the latter was killed outright. The negroes finally drove the whites from the ground. The Sheriff and a posse arrived from Somerville yesterday morning, and found a hundred and fifty negroes armed with guns and pistols. The Sheriff ordered them to give up their arms, which was replied to by a volley from the negroes. The citizens joined the Sheriff's party, and a general fight ensued, lasting an hour, during which four whites were wounded, and two negroes believed to have been killed. Dispatches were sent to Memphis for a body of armed Police to come out, but the negroes had in the meantime dispersed, and all is now quiet, with no signs of another disturbance."

POLITICAL.

Massachusetts State Democratic Convention at Worcester—Renomination of Hon. John Quincy Adams for Governor.

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 24.—The Democratic State Convention, which met here to-day, nominated the following ticket:

For Governor—J. Q. Adams, of Quincy.
For Lieutenant-Governor—S. C. Lamb, of Greenfield.
For Secretary of State—John K. Tarbox, of Lawrence.
For Treasurer—Mr. Heywood, of Gardner.
For Attorney-General—J. G. Abbot, of Boston.
For Auditor—Phineas Allen, of Pittsfield.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing the Prohibitory law; condemning the Legislature for not granting charters to certain labor organizations; recommending that the reëstablishment of the school district system be made a direct issue in the State election; calling for economy in the public expenditures; recognizing the duty of acquiescing in the results already arrived at in national affairs; expressing confidence in the ultimate success of the party, &c.

The Convention, in the main, was harmonious. Colonel ADAMS, in accepting his nomination, made a speech, which was much commented, both by the Democrats and Republicans. He criticised the tariff system, and endeavored to support his arguments in favor of free trade by quotations from Commissioner WELLS' report. In speaking of the Prohibition law he recommended that an invitation be extended to the Republicans to join the party and defeat the law. He had no objection to cider himself, but rather liked it, regarding it as the real New-England drink, and he wished their opponents to drink more of it. He thought a bottle of hard cider would benefit even Dr. MINER. He cautioned his adherents to carry on the campaign fairly, openly and courteously, and let the best man win. The great question, the main question was, whether the liberal Republicans would act with them.

THE INDIANS.

The Navajoes in New-Mexico—Effect of Governor Mitchell's Proclamation Declaring Them Outlaws.

Mr. EDWARD CROMWELL, a native of this city, a member of the United States Indian Commission, has received the following dispatch from Mr. COLYER, one of the Special Commissioners appointed by the President, and who is now on his way to Alaska:

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21, 1869.

If Governor MITCHELL'S unwise proclamation declaring the Navajoes outlaws should be enforced, it will probably break up the agency and school at Fort Defiance, as there are no United States troops nearer than Fort Wingate, forty-five miles distant. The war with the Hualpiai Apaches was commenced by a white man named MULLER, who killed Wallapai Chief's child, in 1866. They were at peace before this. The war with the Apache Mojaves was reopened in 1866 by some teamsters under CHERWOOTE, a freight er, who killed a dozen or more of the head Chiefs at Ha Pas, where they were invited to sign a treaty of peace. I leave for Sitka by the steamer Newbern on Monday.

VINCENT COLYER.

Arrival of Father McMahon at Buffalo—Preparations for the Coming Industrial Exhibition.

Workmen to-day commenced to erect an additional building adjoining the Skating Rink, to accommodate the engines and heavy machinery for the International Industrial Exhibition, which is to be held in this city on the 6th of October, under the auspices of the Mechanics' Institute of this city. Applications for permission to exhibit are daily received from Canada, every portion of the United States and Europe.

A Remarkable Meteor Seen in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—A very remarkable meteor was seen here about 7 o'clock this evening in the west. Instead of moving horizontally, as is usual, it ascended vertically and then descended over the same course, exploding and leaving a fleecy cloud, like smoke or steam, which lasted in the sky about ten minutes.

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 24.—Soon after sunset to-night a beautiful display of the aurora borealis was witnessed here. The sky was cloudless and the moon appeared unusually brilliant, but the light of the aurora was distinctly visible for two or three hours, bright bands, appearing like rainbows, stretched across the sky, while jets of light shot up from the horizon.

The Weather and the Crops.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 24.—The weather continues hot and dry.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Aug. 24.—The weather is clear with an east wind; thermometer 84°.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 24.—The weather was showery yesterday and cloudy to-day. There were heavy showers yesterday and last night at Staunton, Lexington and Old Sweet Springs.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 24.—In the vicinity of Harrisburg the crops gathered are good, and those to be gathered are excellent. There has been no great quantity of rain, but no suffering for want of it. The Susquehanna is not as low as in 1866 by some fifteen inches, notwithstanding the vast supply required for the use of the old State Canal. From the mouth of the Juniata to the Columbia there were strong indications of rain this afternoon.

The Connecticut Tobacco Crop.

From the Hartford Times, Aug. 24.

Growers of tobacco have begun to cut the crop of 1869. It has grown and ripened at a very rapid rate during August, and some fields were cut as early as the 20th. It promises to be a good one. Certainly it will be good as to quantity, in this vicinity, which is the centre and best locality for seedleaf. How it may be in towns north of Connecticut we know not. Here the most and best tobacco is grown, and here the crop, though unequal even in adjoining fields, is on the whole a very fair one in quantity. Its quality is yet to be determined. It looks well. Complaint is made in some quarters of "bug veins" again; but we judge this will not be general. It is yet too early to form an opinion regarding the general quality and value of the new crop.

The heavily-laden wagons, filled with cases of tobacco, which have formed a part of the traffic and movement seen in the streets during the past fortnight, have shown that the termination of the "packing season" for the '68 crop has been marked by active business. Large sales have commonly been made on private terms; but good wrappers have gone up to forty cents, and even higher figures. We make the following quotations regarding old stock:

Old leaf of 1868 and 1867 crop sells, "new weight" fillers, 8 cents; seconds, 12 cents; wrappers, 18 to 20 cents. Some is held yet by farmers, but at higher prices, and they will do well to sell now at the above prices, and the sooner the better, for as soon as the 1869 crop is cured it will sell for the old will cease.

The crop of 1868 has all been bought up and gone into the warehouse long ago. Anything fine of that crop brings very high prices.

The 1869 crop sells, if sound, fillers, 10 to 12 cents; seconds, 15 to 20 cents; wrappers, 25 to 30 cents, according to selection. There is not much demand yet for high price leaf, and will not be until the cheaper grades are all bought up. The great objection to this 1869 crop is that of its being mostly dark-colored leaf, when the demand is for light-colored.

SCIENCE.

The American Association—Proceedings in the Convention at Salem—Interesting Papers on a Variety of Subjects.

From Our Special Correspondent.

SALEM, Mass., Tuesday, Aug. 23, 1869.

After the pleasant recreations of Saturday, and the quiet rest of Sunday, the members returned with fresh zest to the duties of the session. The Association was called to order at 10 o'clock this morning, by the President, Colonel FOSTER. After some preliminary business the following persons were elected members, viz.:

Porter C. Bliss, New-York; Fred. E. Stimpson, Boston; S. F. Langley, Pittsburg, Penn.; Geo. D. Phippen, Salem, Mass.; F. P. Hurd, M. D., Wakefield, Mass.; D. S. Merrill, Newburyport, Mass.; Ira Wasson, Lanesville, Conn.; Daniel H. Wells, New-Haven, Conn.; Abner C. Goodell, Jr., Salem, Mass.; J. H. Gregory, Marblehead, Mass.; S. O. Pierce, Beverly, Mass.; E. H. Doolittle, Washington, D. C.; E. M. Coan, M. D., New-York; James M. Barnard, Boston, Mass.; James D. Warner, Brooklyn, N. Y.; J. A. McNiel, Salem, Mass.

The Association then resolved itself into sections.

SECTION A—THE ECLIPSE.

Section A met in the Tabernacle Church, and was organized by the appointment of Professor B. PEIRCE Chairman; and Professor WURTH having resigned as Secretary, Professor MURRAY was appointed in his place. The time of the section was taken up with reading of papers and discussing the phenomena of the solar eclipse. Professor MURRAY, of New-Brunswick, N. J., made a report of the observations made on the physical phenomena of the eclipse at Mattoon, Ill. He saw seven protuberances of the sun, two of them of remarkable size and brilliancy. One was curved like an antelope's horns, and another resembled a full-rigged ship—all of them of a rosy red color. Professor MURRAY exhibited a beautiful diagram of the eclipse, showing the corona and protuberances. He described the corona as an irregular band of light surrounding the sun, but extending, at certain points, out to a great distance. There were five of these points very prominent, and others smaller, one being distinctly curved. Others made reports. Professor B. PIERCE, of Cambridge, gave a description of the protuberances seen on the moon's disc during an eclipse of the sun, and a history of the observations made upon them at different times, no definite description having been given of them previous to 1842. He considered the corona altogether inexplicable. He was disposed to agree with LE VERRIER that it was not a real corona of either the sun or moon, but an optical illusion produced by the atmosphere. Before hearing the descriptions here he had formed the opinion that it was caused by meteoric showers from the sun.

SECTION B—THE PLASTICITY OF PEBBLES AND ROCKS.

Professor WM. P. BLAKE, of California, presented a paper, in which, after reviewing the various notices which had been published of the distorted pebbles in the conglomerate of Purgatory, near Newport, and at other localities, he described the remarkable compression and drawing out of quartz pebbles in a conglomerate upon the Colorado River, Arizona. He maintained that the flattening and elongation so plainly to be seen in those pebbles were the result of enormous pressure and tension either with or without any great elevation of the temperature. The peculiar outcrops of slates in the gold region of California, known among the miners as "grave-stone" slates, for the reason that they resemble tombstones, he regards as nothing more than sandy and pebbly strata that have been similarly drawn out. Some of the pebbles in these slates have been drawn out to twice or three times their original diameter. This shows a vast amount of elongation of rock-masses, and a very considerable thinning down of strata in consequence of such elongation. Various hypotheses have been proposed to account for such distortions of rocks. The experiments of TRESCA, of Paris, were mentioned in support of the plastic theory. These experiments show that under sufficient pressure solids may be made to flow like liquids, and that in flowing they follow the same laws. Every coin illustrates the fact of the mobility of the particles of solids. Professor BLAKE thought that in many places great masses of rocks had been much more drawn out and distorted by simple mechanical force than has been generally supposed or admitted by geologists. Conglomerates had been converted into slates and schists having a lamellar slaty structure and cleavage. In the remarks which followed, Professor T. STERRY HUNT mentioned the recent observation of locally distorted strata in Maine, and Professor MARSH showed some specimens of the distorted pebbles from Newport.

STRATOGRAPHY OF THE PALÆOZOIC ROCKS OF VERMONT.

J. B. PERRY, of the Museum of Comparative Zoölogy at Cambridge, read a paper on the palæozoic formations of Western Vermont, which consist of gneiss, horablende rock, talcose schist and of other like rocks. He contended that the stratography of these rocks demands, as Paleontology suggests, the recognition in that section of country of two great systems of formation, each having its distinctive and characteristic fauna. Professor AGASSIZ spoke in high terms of the results achieved by Mr. PERRY, and in reply to an objection from Professor C. H. HITCHCOCK to the introduction of new terms into the established paleontological nomenclature, said that the whole system needs revision, and the sooner it comes the better.

MOSASAURIAN REPTILES.

Professor O. C. MARSH presented a notice of this class of fossils taken from the green sand of New-Jersey. He exhibited large portions of the skeletons of this class of reptiles which, he said, were evidently of the snake kind, and of enormous size—one being at least thirty feet long, and another not less than seventy-five feet, and resembling strongly the popular idea of the sea serpent.

Professor AGASSIZ said these specimens were exceedingly interesting, but he was not satisfied that they were of the snake group. The ankle joints of birds are only half way across. So this articulation of the joint of the lower jaw indicated a relation but not identity to the snake group.

GEOLOGY OF LOUISIANA.

The next paper, containing a "Summary of Results of a Late Geological Reconnoissance of Louisiana," prepared by E. W. HILGARD, Esq., of Washington, was read by Professor C. H. HITCHCOCK. The paper was illustrated by profiles of Artesian wells sunk in the Fort Hudson group and on the west fork of Calcasieu River, exhibiting the geological character of the rocks and materials through which they pass. One of these wells has been sunk 600, and another 1,300 feet. One of the most remarkable discoveries connected with these wells is an immense bed of sulphur, overlying an immense gypsum formation. Their great extent seems to refer them to the same epoch, while their economic value can scarcely be estimated. The bed of sulphur is 120 feet thick, and lies at a depth of not MEXICO.

Mexican Politics—Anti-American Feeling—Senseless Pageants—Mexican Credit—Beautiful Contrasts—American Intervention—Ex-Secretary Seward.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MEXICO, Tuesday, Aug. 10, 1869.

The various experiments of the Mexican people in trying to accomplish that—for them, seemingly—hardest of tasks: their own self-government, have, so far, failed. They seem to have forgotten the lessons of the past. The Republicanism which they boasted during the dark days of foreign occupation no longer exists, and the so-called patriots of the Mexican Republic have attended its recent funeral with little feelings of regret. Known to the world at large as a Republic, and really existing as a Dictatorship, within whose limits the strong arm of power and the insidious one of corruption accomplish by slow degrees the prostration and stifling of all free expression, Mexico really possesses nothing to recommend her to the consideration of her most ardent political friends. To-day the idea of American colonization, and the civilization and consequent progress which marches with it, step by step, is one of the greatest bugbears that exists for the whole Mexican people. Inducements are held out to Americans to settle and, as a matter of course, to civilize the country. With what result? Let the massacres of Cordoba, Tuxpan and other places answer. Disguise it as they may, from the Cabinet down to the dirtiest pulquero, who trudges along barefooted after his burro, we are, for them all, nothing but gringos—hated by them because they see in an influx of Americans into the paradise rendered wretched by their possession of it, the accomplishment of a higher destiny for it, and their own consequent and inevitable doom. Vainly they will try to oppose obstacles to their "manifest destiny," they will have finally to give way to the onward progress of a higher civilization, or be crushed beneath the incubus of its weight. Instead of recognising this great truth, the political chiefs of this Mexican Republic are attempting to instil more bitter hatred than that already existing against the Americans and all foreign residents generally.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF GUATIMOZIN.

Instead of endeavoring to quiet the country and settle its affairs, the Mexican Cabinet is busily engaged in planning out pageants to tickle the vanity of the Mexican rabble of the capital by disinterring the mouldering dust of dead heroes and interring them again with all the ridiculous pomp so characteristic of the Mexican character. The newest sensation in this line, about which the assembled wisdom of the Juarez Cabinet has busied itself, will prove that of the celebration of the anniversary of GUATIMOZIN's (the successor of the famous MONTEZUMA) imprisonment, which will take place on the 13th. The celebration will consist in inaugurating a statue to the memory of this departed hero, whom Mexican history and traditions have raised to the sublimity of a demi-god. The object of this demonstration is a piece of political diplomacy on the part of the Government, and is intended to flatter the vanity of the Indian races, effecting a more perfect union among them, and refining, if possible, the deadly hatred which they entertain against the white race. The policy of this move on the part of the Government becomes at once apparent, when it is considered that the mixed and white elements constitute the intelligent portion of the Mexican people. The Indians are, on the other hand, ignorant, brutal and superstitious, forming a large numerical majority whose support and favor the Government is anxious to possess; this virtually excludes from power the intelligent and thinking minority, who view with alarm the adoption of a policy on the part of the Government which threatens to conserve to it the enormous power already possessed, or rather, usurped by it, and a corresponding encroachment upon the liberties heretofore enjoyed by the citizens of the defunct republic. Prominent Mexicans, experienced in the history of Mexico's varied political somersaults, predict the most sinister results from the assumption by JUAREZ of the dictatorship, and a feeling of alarm and want of confidence in the future is becoming largely prevalent among all classes, native as well as foreign.

MEXICAN CREDIT.

While JUAREZ and friends are taking part in the raree-shows which they have invented for the diversion of the Mexican populace, as if to afford an illustration of the power of contrast, the doors of a bankrupt treasury are daily besieged by a crowd of needy claimants, beseeching the settlement of their dues on the part of the Government. Quite a motley assemblage, I can assure you, diversified in feature, but drawn together by one common object—that of soliciting a settlement of their claims in the worthless bonos of the Mexican Republic. There they stand, a surging mass composed of ruined contractors, widows of dead Mexican heroes, army veterans and crippled soldiers, one jostling the other and all clamoring for money that is not forthcoming; they are only informed that there is not more than money enough in the treasury to pay the salaries of the President and Ministers. They turn away, despair stamped on their features and anguish wringing their hearts, while President JUAREZ and party move on, in a different scene in one of their own puppet shows, surrounded by guards of honor and the glimmering of numerous candles, after the dust of some resurrected hero of another age. They suffer none of the inconveniences of a depreciated currency. The President receives his salary of $576 in gold weekly. His Ministers are equally fortunate; gold for them, and the miserable, worthless trash known as bonos (bonds) which find sale on the streets at the wretched rate of ten cents on the dollar, for the numerous victims of a bankrupt Government.

COMING TROUBLE.

Conspiracies, plots of assassination, revolutions and counter-revolutions, the inauguration of a terrible war of races and massacres; doubts as to the virtue and patriotism of JUAREZ beginning to steal imperceptibly over the minds of men ones his earnest supporters, added to a dread of his ambition and fears of a coupe de estado and the establishment of a thorough despotism and consequent reign of terror—these are the elements of combustion in the volcanic crater over which Mexico uneasily slumbers. Want of confidence among all—nobody trusts his neighbor—all look forward to the future with gloomy forbodings. Society is wildly overturning all those wise restraints which constituted the elements of its beauty; religion is a mockery, or, at best, a theatrical representation, and religious houses are turned into breweries, where hobstersons gambroos and sagaroos quaff their pulque; blacksmith shops, where the ring of the anvil has succeeded to the religious chant of other times; and theatres, as in the case of San Juan de Letran, where the vulgar clown cracks his still more vulgar jokes, and the jig dancer performs his varied evolutions on the dust under which lie buried the bones of numerous Hermanos de la Caridad, respected even by the horrible orgies of the French Revolution. You see convents and churches half torn down, with their ruins toppling over, and the streets partly obstructed with the debris, and you are told that those ruins commemorate the triumph of the Liberal, now the dictatorial, Party of Mexico. This was done from rage; that, because it was proposed to cut a street through—never yet undertaken—and another because it was ugly and offended the adobe taste of the Montezuman era of architecture. You look in vain for large or small business houses in Mexico carried on by partnership, every Mexican seeming to think that every other Mexican designs to rob or to swindle him. The effects of this sentiment of morality can be conceived at once, and the general structure of society as it exists in Mexico starts from its base of distrust and suspicion.

AMERICAN INTERVENTION.

As a practical cure for all the ills of this Mexican invalid, some propose, and even indignantly clamor for immediate annexation—forcible, of course, because the Mexicans would unite almost as one man against us—of the country to the United States; and another party advocate the establishment of a sort of paternal protectorate on the part of "Uncle Samuel" over the wayward young Mexican Republic. But it seems that the time for American intervention in Mexican affairs has not yet arrived. The moment will come in its own natural order. Patience and a confidence in the certain workings of destiny will quietly accomplish in the course of time, what would now cost the American Government thousands of lives and millions of money to achieve. The development of the rich mineral wealth of Sonora and Chihuahua will be accomplished under the auspices of hardy bands of gold-seekers from the United States, and in their train will follow all the other aids of a rapid civilization. American interests will increase with American population, and be succeeded in Texas and California, the native population will give way in like manner, as they have already done to the indomitable energy of Anglo-Saxon enterprise. Everything seems to indicate that the era of this influx is not far distant; if reports are to be credited, indeed, it has already commenced. LOZADA and his tribes of savages may in conjunction with a strong infusion of the American element, succeed in cutting adrift from the Federal Mexican Union, but the "Republic of the West," which he is striving to establish, will rapidly belong to the scions of another and a superior race. Thus it will be seen that those entering wedges will at last succeed in disrupting the strange anomalous thing called the Mexican Republic, and the branches lopped off from the huge trunk will, by driving the mass of the population south, tend to effect a consolidation of the future Republic of Mexico.

RETURN OF SECRETARY SEWARD.

Secretary SEWARD, on his return from Alaska, will visit Mexico, and be received as the guest of the nation at large. Probably there is no American who shares a larger portion of Mexican sympathy and respect than the celebrated Ex-Secretary of the United States. PORFIO CARRERO.

THE DOMINION.

Speech of the Governor-General at Halifax—He Explains his Quebec Speech—Reciprocity—The Prospects of the Country.

The Governor-General of Canada, Sir JOHN YOUNG, was entertained at a grand banquet in Halifax on Thursday evening last. The Mayor presided, and after the Queen and Royal Family were proposed, Sir JOHN YOUNG, who was received with enthusiasm, made a speech from which we quote the following:

"I hope that this numerous and influential company will not feel disappointed if I entirely abstain from touching on any of the exciting topics of the day, or any of those matters, which, from being still in dispute, are all the more assuredly canvassed, but which are not for my handling. There is one point, however, bordering no doubt upon the debatable ground, on which I must say a few words. The observations which I made at the sumptuous banquet given in my honor at Quebec, have led to great and many comments in motion, and have given rise to a variety of constructions—constructions so various and so opposite that I might almost leave them to contradict and neutralize each other. Almost every paper published in Quebec and Ontario, containing the report of that speech, has been sent to me. From the variety of constructions put upon the speech, one might be led to suppose that I had said something new. What I had said, however, was very simple, and I fear not new. I hold in my hand a correct copy of the speech; and on the point, which, it seems, has been so much canvassed, was this, that the statesmen of England, warned by the events of the last century, and enlightened by the true theories of modern Colonial policy, had acceded to the wishes of the inhabitants of the Dominion of Canada, and had secured to them in full measure the rights and franchises which they claimed; and which, in my opinion, they properly claimed. I then said, at this moment you possess free representative institutions. Your destinies are in your own hands, you are free to choose and follow out your own views. The statesmen and people of England are not more free in the management of their own local affairs or in adopting a line of policy which they think conclusive to their own interests, than are the statesmen and people of the Dominion of Canada. I added, that I believed, generally speaking, the people throughout the Dominion were well satisfied with the institutions under which they lived. I then said that England was in no way indifferent to the position of the Dominion; that she viewed it with pride and confidence; and looking at the question in this light, I said, that the Canadian statesmen and people were the best judges of their own interests, and that if the people of Canada decided on some changes, I was confident that the proposition would receive from the statesmen of England a generous and friendly consideration. I argued from what had taken place to what might take place. I assumed at every stage that Canada should remain for all time to come a firm friend and faithful ally of England. There is no mass of clear conceptions who does not know that it is impossible to conduct an agreement unless the premises are clearly defined; there is no one accustomed to calculation, even to the performance of a very simple problem in algebra, who does not know that if the premises are not stated with extreme accuracy, a confused jumble of figures and inextricable confusion will be the result. That was the case in the instance to which I am alluding.

I have not one word to retract or qualify in what I said at Quebec; but some one or other wishing to prove that I had said that the Dominion of Canada was not highly esteemed by the people of England, or that England had some desire to get rid of the Dominion—substituted one word for another in the report of my speech, and on that word I wish to make an observation. I referred to the possibility of Canada wishing for some other form of alliance, and every one could see from the context that I meant alliance with the mother country. For the word alliance the word allegiance was substituted—a word which I never uttered, and which does not occur in any speech. The phrase "change of allegiance," was added to the speech as if it was possible that any Governor-General would speak before the people of the Dominion about a change of allegiance, or suggest that it could be looked upon with complacency by the people of England. I said also that the statesmen of England looked to the statesmen and people of Canada for guidance, and this, too, has been misconstrued. I did not mean that they would be guided by the opinions of every person who did not find his position as comfortable as he could wish—of any herdsman, for instance, whose abilities did not correspond with his aspirations, or of any storekeeper whose circumstances were not as pleasant as he desired. Individuals are apt in such matters to be guided by their personal feelings and interests. A particular interest may be depressed for the moment—it may be so depressed that they might be induced to adopt the most violent means to obtain relief for a trifling and temporary suffering. But those are not the modes by which statesmen and countries decide on a policy. When the mother country, or any other nation, would look to is the Central Government. Any change proposed by the statesmen and Parliament of the Dominion will be carefully considered by the mother country. If the Parliament and the Dominion of Canada decide in a change in the form of alliance, it will be a matter of grave consideration for the people of England. The thought of the transfer of allegiance never crossed my mind. It is evident from the remainder of my speech that the Dominion was to remain a firm and faithful ally to England forever, which couldn't possibly be the case if it transferred its allegiance to a friendly but foreign power. Now, having corrected this inaccuracy, or having attempted to correct—not, perhaps, to the satisfaction of those who have uttered these criticisms, for I dare say it will be well to this paper you name and the name of your father are published as witnesses. That this father was examined on behalf of your counsel, you may no doubt, be sure; but your father was not examined, whereas, if your counsel, was not even asked whether the paper was genuine. But to consummate your purpose the death of Miss STEINECKE was necessary; this theory have found by their verdict, you then afterward effected, by administering to her poison. The arguments of your persuasive and eloquent counsel on the motion for a new trial having failed to satisfy the Court that the verdict of the jury is not sustained by the evidence, it becomes our solemn but imperative duty to pronounce the sentence of the law upon you, which is that you, PAUL SCHOEPFF, be taken hence by the Sheriff of Cumberland County, to the jail of said county, from whence you came, and from thence to the place of execution, within the walls or yard of said jail, and that you be there hanged by the neck until you are dead."

The Judge then added the usual prayer, "And may God have mercy on your soul."

PETER COOPER AND THE WORKINGMEN.

Delegates from the Labor Congress Express its Thanks to Mr. Cooper.

Speeches on the Occasion—Interesting Reminiscences of Cooper Institute—How it was Built, and its Present Pecuniary Condition.

Previous to adjourning, the National Labor Congress, which met in Philadelphia last week, passed a resolution tendering thanks to PETER COOPER Esq., of this City, for his advocacy of the American monetary system, and of the claims of the laboring masses, and appointed a Committee of five to make a formal presentation to him of this token of esteem and respect.

In accordance with the directions contained in that resolution, the Special Committee so appointed, together with a few friends, proceeded to Mr. COOPER's residence, corner of Lexington-avenue and Twenty-second-street, at 8 P. M. yesterday, and discharged the duty imposed on them. The members of the Committee were General A. M. WEST, of Mississippi; HAL. T. WALKER, of Alabama; A. C. PHELPS, of Connecticut; E. L. ROSEMAN, of New-York, and S. R. PRATT, of Massachusetts. After the Committee had been individually introduced to Mr. COOPER by H. R. AUSTIN, Esq., of Tennessee, General WEST, who acted as speaker for the Committee, said:

Mr. COOPER—We are a Committee appointed by the late National Labor Congress to present you the thanks of that body for the interest you have ever manifested in behalf of the workingmen of the country, and to assure you that we fully appreciate the efforts you have made to advance the welfare of the laboring masses. The authority by which we come here is embodied in the following resolution, which I will read. (General WEST here read the resolution, and continued:) It becomes my duty, as well as my pleasure, to tender, on behalf of the Congress and of this Committee, this well-merited tribute to one who is justly considered the representative workingman of this great nation, and whose example we all should try to imitate. Allow me to assure you, sir, that the National Labor Congress cannot, in no agrarian ideas; that it desires the enforcement of no agrarian measures; that we are governed solely by principles which, if put into operation, would, in our honest judgment, tend equally to the advantage of the capitalist and the laborer. While the workingman will be benefited most by preventing industry and marked probity of character, you are regarded, as an exemplar in whose steps we would gladly follow, we look with peculiar satisfaction on your whole past life, and especially on your munificent gift of a portion of your wealth to an institution for securing a scientific education to the children of the poor, which not on your part excites within us feelings not only of gratitude but of admiration. We commend your worthy example to men of wealth throughout the country, especially those who, like you, have come into the possession of riches by means of industry, economy and integrity; and we cordially invite you, and prayerfully hope that you may be present with us at our next Congress, in Cincinnati, on the third Monday in August, 1870, if for no other purpose than to give weight to our deliberations by your countenance and advice; and so set at rest any charges of agrarian tendencies that may be urged against us while we prove to the world by your presence that we make no war upon capital.

Mr. COOPER, evidently impressed by the mark of respect, replied:

GENTLEMEN REPRESENTATIVES OF THE LABOR CONGRESS: I return you my most sincere thanks for this tribute of esteem on behalf of the workingmen of the country, and beg to assure you that my sympathies are now, as they have been, with every effort calculated to ameliorate the condition of the laboring classes. I was always a workingman, and have never considered myself anything else. I am glad to see the manifestation of a desire on your part to pursue a course of action which will advance your own interests without working detriment to the of any other portion of society. I hope the workingmen will persevere in well-doing, until the whole community unites with them to establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, and promote the general welfare—the three great objects of our form of government. You were pleased to allude to my humble efforts to bring within the reach of the children of the poorer classes the means of obtaining a scientific education. I have done what I could; have laid the foundation, at least, of a system of gratuitous education in this respect which, I hope, will be perfected by others more competent for the work than myself, and which I earnestly wish may be hereafter extended over all our common country. It is only by giving to the children of the working masses the knowledge of scientific matters that we must expect to see the interests of society advanced in a degree calculated to prove eminently beneficial to men in all classes and conditions of life. I began my career with nothing but naked hands and an honest purpose, and if I have been prospered, I must attribute my success, under Divine Providence, simply to the fact that I made honesty my rule of conduct and industry my motto. You may not be aware, but it is true, that the erection of the institution to which you have referred, cost nearly all I was then worth; and, at one time, the completion of it seemed to be a matter of doubt. Providence favored me, however, and while its erection was going forward I had a prosperous business, which enabled me to bring it to completion, and now it is secured beyond all contingencies. It is regularly chartered by the State, exempt from all for taxes, and all the rents and emoluments accruing from it are to be forever devoted to the object which impelled me to establish it—the education of such young men and women as are desirous of gaining scientific knowledge, and have not the means of paying for so doing. If it shall continue to benefit these, in the future, as it has in the past, I shall feel that I have been fully compensated for any efforts I may have undertaken in their behalf. And now, gentlemen of the Committee, allow me, through you, to return my heartfelt thanks to the National Labor Congress, that worthy and influential body of my fellow-workingmen, for this kindly remembrance of one who has not done much, but whose earnest wish and prayer is, for the success and happiness of all such as follow honest industrial pursuits for the maintenance of themselves and their families, and, by so doing, advance the interest and the glory of our common country.

The Committee then accepted an invitation to partake of the hospitalities of Mr. COOPER's mansion, and after spending an hour in social converse they bade him an affectionate adieu. Mr. COOPER expressed his desire to be present at the meeting of the next Labor Congress, but did not feel authorized to make a promise to that effect so far in advance. Altogether, the affair was a praiseworthy tribute to Mr. COOPER, and most creditable to the Committee having the matter in charge.

The New Post Office.

The work of excavating the site of the new Post Office is fairly begun. As soon as the foundation of the exterior walls is laid, the fence now inclosing the sidewalks on Broadway and Park-row will be moved in to the line of the old iron railing. It was considered safer to take in the walks while the excavation, twenty-five feet below the surface, was being made; the work also could be done much quicker with the additional room. Mr. MULLETT thinks the sidewalks will be free to the public again before Winter sets in, when they will be most needed. A wooden building is now going up on the north side for the accommodation of workmen and tools. In regard to the interior of the building the plans are not complete, and will not be for some time, as improvements and modifications may be desirable. The architect's chief aim is to have the building lighted and ventilated in the best manner possible.

The City authorities still seem indisposed to make an exchange of ground with the Government. They now wish to sell the upper site, but the architect says he has neither money nor authority to buy it, and proposes to proceed with the work he has commenced.

The building will be finished in about three years.

Boating Accident at Kingsbridge.

The residence of GEORGE W. WETMORE, Esq., on the Westchester side of Harlem River, at Kingsbridge, was entered on Monday noon and robbed of a writing-case, containing a number of important papers, a lady's gold hunting watch and chain valued at $200, a cameo breastpin and ear-rings, surrounded with pearls, valued at $200; a gold bracelet, with enamelled band, valued at $50; a pair of ear-rings, set with coral and pearl, valued at $75, and some other articles of jewelry. The value of all the property taken was about $600, besides important papers which cannot be replaced.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

Signatures to the Mammoth Petition not Easily Obtained.

The weekly meeting of the Woman's Suffrage Association yesterday was somewhat informal, owing to the absence of Mrs. STANTON, Mrs. PHELPS, Miss ANTHONY and others at the Newport Convention. Mrs. WILBURN presided, about twenty ladies composing the meeting. A vote of thanks was passed to the organization of the Seven Sangers of Vermont for their resolutions recommending the passage by Congress of Woman's Suffrage amendment. As there was no business before the meeting, Mrs. FOSDICK gave her experiences in trying to obtain signatures to the petition, now in circulation, asking Congress to pass a sixteenth amendment to the Constitution giving the vote to woman. She said she had been to a very large number of persons, but could show small results. Strange as it might seem, the cold shoulder was turned upon her much oftener by her own sex than by men. The women she saw—and she had been to all classes, from the lady in the drawing-room to the servant girl in the kitchen—invariably asked her what good the vote would do them—they had enough trouble now—did she want to make men of them? The men received her with more consideration. Some shook their heads gravely and wanted to think about it; others signed readily; others gave a flat refusal; a few wanted their wives' permission first; and one declared that if women were allowed to vote there would be no marriages! The speaker stated that she had been among the employes at the Bible House. From the men she got a number of signatures, but in the girls' and women's department she labored in vain, not a single one wishing to sign. She found them wholly ignorant of the objects of the movement and could get their attention only by telling them that the woman's vote meant equal wages for both sexes where they did the same work. Still they held off. Of the seventy-five signatures Mrs. FOSDICK has obtained, less that twenty-five are women's.

Remarks on the subject were made by Mrs. BLAKE, Miss JAMES, Mrs. SOMERBY and others. Owing to Miss ANTHONY's absence, the subject of her relation to the Philadelphia Labor Convention was not brought up.

Trial of Chemical Fire Engine.

The owners of a new chemical fire engine gave an exhibition of its working yesterday afternoon at the Battery. Among the spectators were several of the Fire Commissioners and Chief Engineer KIRCKLAND. The particular merit claimed for the engine was that the stream thrown from it was a chemical liquid which would completely smother a flame.

In the air-chamber of the engine is fixed a small perforated cylinder containing a certain compound through which the water must pass before it enters the hose. What the compound was the inventors declined to state, but claimed that the water, thus combined with the chemical mixture, generated carbonic acid gas the moment it touched the fire, which displayed the oxygen and rendered further combustion impossible. The trial yesterday was successful as an exhibition. A quantity of old barrels, stuffed with straw and covered with tar, were set on fire, and the chemical stream turned on it. The effect was similar to what water would have produced, except that where the stream was poured the flames seemed unable to spread again, at least for a time. The fire was put out in about five minutes.

The Chief-Engineer watched the process closely, but could not see that the results were particularly remarkable. In his own opinion, water, pure and unadulterated, was the best thing to extinguish a fire with.

The new machine worked well, and better results may yet be obtained from the invention. It has the advantage of being no more expensive than ordinary engines. In fact, the solution, which costs but a trifle, could be used in our present steam machines.

Fatal Accident at the Adirondack Steel Works.

Yesterday morning at 7:10 a boy named JOHN ARMOUR was drawn into the ponderous rollers of a machine used for rolling steel in the Adirondack Steel Works at the foot of Warren-street, Jersey City, and instantly killed. When the accident occurred, the lad was engaged in oiling the machinery, and necessarily while in motion. He had temporarily removed the guard, a board fender, for greater facility in oiling, and the spout of his can got caught in the rollers, and, foolishly retaining his hold upon it, his hand was caught and he was drawn into the machinery, at the time making 120 revolutions per minute. The poor boy did not have time to cry out, and before the machine could be stopped he had gone through and come back, (he machine having a return motion,) and been dropped out into the pit beneath a mangled mass of matter, his head being the only part bearing any resemblance to a human being, a portion of the remains still adhering to the rollers.

The remains were gathered up, and by permission of the Coroner removed to the residence of the mother of the deceased. They will be interred to-day.

Last Fall another boy was crushed to death by the rollers in the same works, and at the suggestion of the Coroner's jury in that case, the proprietors caused guards to be placed around the rollers for the prevention of like accidents; but to oil the rollers, which ARMOUR was engaged in doing, it was necessary to remove the guards.

Deceased resided with his mother, who is a widow, at No. 130 Hudson-street, Jersey City. The family has been exceedingly unfortunate. Mr. ARMOUR lost his life by an accident on board of a vessel some years since, and a younger son lost his life by an accident on the railroad a year and a half ago.

Picnic of the Fenian Brotherhood.

Yesterday the Fenians of New-York and vicinity had a gala time of it at Jones' Wood. The Brotherhood held a grand civic and military picnic there in the afternoon and evening, which was attended by thousands who enjoyed it immensely. The Legion of St. Patrick turned out too strong, including companies from Paterson, N. J., and Brooklyn. They were reviewed on the grounds toward evening by the Commander-in-Chief, Colonel SWEASY, who also addressed them briefly. Dancing, shooting, swinging and fun of all sorts was indulged in by the merry Hibernians.

A FENIAN IN TROUBLE AT MORRISANIA.

They were ordered to disperse, when a printer from New-York by the name of CHARLES F. EUGENT, refusing to postpone his harangue in favor of Fenianism to a more appropriate time and place, was locked up for the night and fined yesterday by Justice HAUPTMAN.

FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

Disagreement of the Jury—Conflicting Verdicts.

Coroner FLYNN held an inquest yesterday in the case of SAMUEL G. MORROW, a lad, 11 years of age, whose parents reside at No. 548 Hudson-street, and who died from injuries received in West Twelfth-street, near Abingdon-square, on Wednesday evening last by being run over by car No. 1 of the Bleecker-street Railroad. The accident occurred at that point in West Twelfth-street where the Bleecker-street track intersects that of the Eighth-avenue Railroad, and it was while the lad was attempting to avoid an Eighth-avenue car that he was knocked down by the horses attached to the Bleecker-street car and the wheels of the car passed over one of his legs, crushing it in a terrible manner.

The following is an abstract of the testimony taken before the Coroner:

Israel Bowen, of No. 320 West Twelfth-street, deposed that immediately after the accident he conveyed the lad to a drug-store, where the fractured limb was bound up; the lad was then taken to the residence of his parents where he subsequently died.

John Crowe, of West Twelfth and Hudson streets, testified that he saw the boy run against the horses attached to the car and he was knocked down by the dash-board; did not see the car pass over him, but after the accident saw the fractured leg dangling and blood streaming from it; the driver of the car "broke up" as soon as possible; the deceased was attempting to cross the track in front of the horses.

Peter A. Norris, driver of the car by which the deceased lad was run over, testified that the deceased jumped on the front step of the car, (right side,) and on being told to leave jumped off again, and putting his fingers to his nose laughed at the witness; he again told him to go away when the boy started to run and ran under the forelegs of the horses; he applied the brake with all his power; he stopped the car quickly, but not in time to prevent the accident; the drivers are allowed forty minutes to make half a trip; the distance from the depot to the terminus being about three miles; if the brakes of a car are in good order a car can be stopped within ten or twelve feet on a down grade.

Wm. Angel, the conductor of the car, was examined, but his testimony was merely corroborative of that given by the driver.

The case was then given to the jury, who, after a lengthy deliberation, failed to agree, and returned two verdicts as follows:

That the deceased came to his injuries accidentally received by being run over by car No. 1 of the Bleecker-street line, on the 18th day of August, and we exonerate the driver from all blame in the matter, and we consider that he endeavored to his utmost exertion to prevent the occurrence.

(Signed) DENNIS O'NEIL,
P. J. MCKENNA,
RICHARD WILLIAMS,
FRANCIS CLEMENTS.

The dissenting jurors rendered the following verdict:

That SAMUEL G. MORROW came to his death from injuries received on the 18th day of August, 1869, and we consider said Company deserving of censure for not having some means on the front platforms to prevent persons getting on the car, and we likewise censure the driver for not stopping the car sooner.

(Signed) JOHN J. BEGAN,
JOHN MCCARTHY.

Coroner FLYNN decided to hold MORRIS, the driver, in $500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

SUSQUEHANNA RAILROAD WAR.

The Defendants Ramsey and Van Valkenburg Before Judge Barnard.

In the case of AYRE CHASE vs. JOHN W. VAN VALKENBURG and others, the defendants, JOSEPH H. RAMSEY and JOHN W. VAN VALKENBURG, were yesterday before Judge BARNARD, in obedience to an attachment for contempt of Court, in having violated and resisted its orders.

In addition to the interrogatories which were filed, the defendants were orally examined by Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, and Mr. VAN VALKENBURG testified as follows:

I did send men down on the road from Albany; they were not desperadoes nor roughs; don't have any such men in Albany; they went down to protest the property of the road in general, and to stop the Fisk party from making a raid on our road; this was after I turned Fisk out of our office in Albany, about Monday or Tuesday; did not know of the men being armed; gave no directions to arm them; did not arm them myself; did not leave Albany with them; I did not know where the books of the office were when Fisk came there on Saturday morning, nor do I know where they have been since; have not seen any of them since; I left Albany shortly afterward and went to Cherry Valley Corners; finally went to another State; Pruyn told me on the night of the 6th of August that he had been appointed receiver; told me this in Henry Smith's office; I was sent for to come there; Pruyn put me in charge of the general office of the Company in Albany; Henry Smith, Ramsey, Fisk and Pruyn were at Smith's office; I got there about nine o'clock; when I first got there Pruyn did not inform me that he had been appointed receiver; Mr. Smith went out and came back about 9:45, and said Pruyn had been appointed receiver, and produced the papers; Pruyn then told me he had been appointed receiver and wanted me to go down and take charge of the general office; the next morning I went to the general office, having in my possession the papers appointing Pruyn receiver; it was some hours afterward that Fisk presented me with the papers appointing him receiver; Fisk said he was going to take possession; I asked him who he was, and he replied "James Fisk, of New-York;" he said he would take possession of the road, if it cost millions of money and "book my number of men; I told him if I had possession of the property of the receiver, and would keep possession; I forced Fisk out of a chair he was sitting in the Treasurer's room; I say, at the time Pruyn claimed the receivership, all the proper papers, and I believed I was simply doing my duty, in obedience to the orders of the receiver in accordance with law, and not disobeying any other branch of the Supreme Court; Fisk reached the office before the ordinary business hours; the funds and books were all locked up; five or six athletic men accompanied Fisk; they were all strangers to me; Fisk said, "These are my boys;" he said, "Rush in, boys, and take possession;" they came; they after-ward went; I found Herrick was cooperating with Fisk; Fisk was very excitable and abusive; he talked in the blustery style; said was "going to have" the road the decree opened, and ordered them to be opened; he said, "This is the twenty-seventh raid I have made, and I propose to take you fellows;" I told him he'd have a good time; I told him I was there by order of Mr. Pruyn, who had been appointed receiver by Mr. Justice Peckham; he said he didn't care anything for that; he then ordered his "boys" in and told them to put my "boys" out; I then took Fisk by the arm, and there was a pretty lively mauls among all hands, but Fisk and his "boys" were deposited outside of the office; Pruyn came in afterward, as did also Fisk; Pruyn told Fisk that he (Pruyn) had been appointed receiver; Fisk insisted on remaining, and did remain until the office closed; Fisk offered to play Ramsey a game of "seven-up" for the possession of the road; the men went out on Monday and Tuesday to prevent the road from raids by the Fisk party; they were told to drive the marauders back, if they showed violence; the Governor took possession of the road in the afternoon, and the trains ran regularly the next day; Fisk made no other effort to take possession; the Deputy sheriff arrested Fisk; was advised to send men, take up the tracks and destroy the trestle-work, by Mr. Pruyn; was acting in good faith; knew Fisk had been appointed receiver by Mr. Justice Barnard, and that he had possession of about fifteen miles of the road, which had been taken by them by force; I thought it was my duty to eject those men; Fisk, or any of his party used force to the office until force had been used against them; frogs were put down to throw engines from the track, to prevent our depots from being destroyed by the Fisk party; there was a division of parties on our road—Ben Ramsey and the anti-Ramsey party; Herrick was opposed to Ramsey; the frogs were also used to prevent accidents from trains running contrary to my orders, and to the time table, and were used when desired to switch of the trains when at slow speed, and no accident could happen by the use of them.

Mr. Joseph H. Ramsey testified that he first heard of the restraint, Aug. 4; about the same time heard that Fisk and Coulter had been appointed receivers; understood measures were then taken to have Pruyn appointed; believed the stock books were in the possession of Pruyn; has caused no entries to be made in the books since they have been in the possession of Pruyn, as he feared he might thereby violate the injunction; believes the books to be in the possession of Mr. Smith; they were concealed lest the safe should be broken open; the books were taken to Mr. Smith's office; did not believe they were there now, nor did he think they had been removed out of the State by Pruyn; he believed they were in Albany. Ramsey further testified that he had not tried to put Fisk and Hatch out of the office but did advise Van Valkenburg to take measures to resist them. At this point the examination was adjourned until this morning at 10 A. M.

The argument on the order appointing receivers and the injunction is adjourned until Sept. 13.

THE WEIGHMASTER'S FRAUDS.

The Examination of General Egan—Testimony for the Defense Delay in the Case.

The examination into the frauds alleged against THOS. W. EGAN, while acting as United States Weigher, was resumed yesterday morning. Assistant District-Attorney JACKSON appeared for the Government. Testimony was taken for the defense, JAMES HOGAN, of No. 620 Greenwich-street, being the first witness. He testified that that he worked in Egan's district in May, when Mr. WILKES and Mr. Buell; he was employed ten days steadily in the district; was not working every day, but was around all the time; never had seen Buell at work, and had never seen him around the pier; heard Buell speaking in regard to the arrest of Egan; he was treating all hands at the time; heard him say that he had drawn $70 and was going to Jersey City; said that he could be booked for $60,000; never saw Buell drunk during business hours.

Cross-examined: Buell told him that he had got $75 to go to Jersey City; he said Egan; he went that it was something concerning the street.

Timothy J. Beach testified that he had endeavored to serve subpoenas on Monts and Waire, witnesses for the defense; that he had been looking for them for eight or ten days, but had been unable to find any trace of them, and that he had been told that there were no such men.

Defendants' counsel subsequently asked for an adjournment, stating that he desired an extension of time to enable him to produce the witnesses.

The Commissioner offered to issue immediate attachments against them, and counsel replied that he did not desire to resort to such a summary measure until another opportunity was given the witnesses to appear.

The case was then adjourned until Thursday next at 2 o'clock, at which time it will doubtless be brought to a conclusion. It has already occupied several days, the examination being closed for the prosecution on the 9th inst. Since that time every facility had been afforded to the defence by the Government for the purpose of preparing witnesses.

Burglaries in New-Hampshire—The Stolen Property Found in This City.

Some nights since a number of bold burglaries were committed in Keene, N. H., and surrounding towns, the burglars in every instance escaping with their booty. It was found, however, after a time, that two cases of shoes stolen from Keene had been sent to this City by express, and the losers coming in pursuit, were referred to Detective FIELD, of the Police Office. That officer on Monday evening found that there was good reason to suspect that the property was in the possession of CHRISTIAN STARR and CHARLES STARR, at No. 498 Pearl-street, but was obliged to wait until the next morning for a search warrant. Going to the place early yesterday morning he found that the suspected persons had removed during the night, but he succeeded during the day in finding them again at No

COMPLAINTS MULTIPLYING.

An account has been published in the TIMES of a certain transaction in which it was alleged one Matt Bedell had been engaged, which was called in law obtaining money by false and fraudulent practices. Yesterday the same prisoner was brought in under the name of G. M. Lawrence, to answer a complaint made against him by Isaac Anderson, of the Harlem Bank, who alleged that on the 9th inst., Bedell alias Lawrence, presented at the Harlem Bank a check for $800, drawn by himself on the Eighth National Bank, which he represented to be good, and thereby obtained the money for it. The check being subsequently presented at the Eighth National Bank was refused payment, Bedell alias Lawrence not having had any account there since the 20th of July. The accused was held for examination.

TUESDAY, Aug. 24—P. M.

The concluding purchases for the month of August by the Treasury Office of United States 5-20s for account of the Sinking Fund will be made to-morrow and next day—$2,000,000 on Wednesday and $1,000,000 on Thursday—making six millions for the whole month. Soon after these purchases are concluded, we have reason to believe that the Secretary of the Treasury will announce further purchases for the month of September. To what amount we are not at present advised, though we believe the condition of the Currency balances in the Treasury at the close of August will authorize another monthly installment of six millions United States 5-20s to be purchased and withdrawn from market.

On the point of employing every available dollar of Currency in the Treasury through the Fall months, beyond the necessary disbursements of the Government, to the purchase of United States 5-20s and the relief of the Money market in moving the great crops of the country, our information is positive that it will be done. We believe that not only the apparent balances standing to the credit of the United States Treasurer in the different Sub-Treasuries and other Depositories throughout the country will be used to these ends, but that no unnecessary amounts of Greenback or National Bank Notes will be withheld in the Treasury from circulation to meet the drafts of Disbursing Officers of the Government. This is an important consideration at the New-York Office especially, where the minimum of Deposits to the credit of these officers is never less than seven and a half or eight millions of dollars.

It is probable that under these arrangements the Secretary of the Treasury will be able to purchase, in all the ensuing months of September, October and November, at least thirty millions United States 5-20s without touching his Gold surplus beyond a million of dollars, fortnightly. But if any doubt on the subject should occur from his diminished revenues in Currency, the difference can readily be made up from his Gold Customs, which, in the three Fall months, will amount to forty-seven or forty-eight million of dollars, or at least fifteen million in excess of the accruing Gold Interest on the Public Debt for the same months.

The Usury laws derive a fresh interest from the recent prosecutions in this City, and the occasion affords us the opportunity to speak of the protection which the law of the United States affords to our National Banks and Bankers on this subject. The legislation of Congress, while respecting, to a reasonable extent, the State restrictions upon the rates of Interest, is more considerate in respect to the penalties for exceeding these rates—in other words, for what, in the legal sense, is termed usury. The National Banks in the State of New-York can charge and receive whatever rate of Interest beyond 7 ⅌ cent. per annum that the condition of the Money market may enable them to prescribe in the purchase of paper or in lending upon collateral security; Provided, they are willing to risk, in the event of the failure of the borrower, an action at law, or a formal claim or demand in contemplation of such action, for a return of the whole interest upon the transaction. The principal of the debt involved is in no way disturbed nor impaired. If more than seven per cent. has been taken by way of usance, the borrower can reclaim the whole interest, and if, on refusal of restitution, or thereafter within two years, he shall elect to sue the Bank, he can recover double the amount of interest paid. Beyond this the penalty for usury under the National Bank does not go. It is not recognized as an indictable offence, nor does it vitiate in any way the principal or validity of the contract. Justice MULLIN, of the Supreme Court of New-York, has settled the application of the law of Congress, in New-York, in a recent case referred to in the following letter:

LAKE ONTARIO NATIONAL BANK, OSWEGO, N. Y., Aug. 21, 1869.

DEAR SIR: Your favor is received and noted. In reply would say that this Bank did have a case in the Courts of the kind you refer to, in which the defence set up was usury. The note in question was drawn payable at our counter, "with New-York exchange," and only the legal interest deducted at the time the note was given. It was claimed that the words "with New-York exchange" was reserving more than the legal interest. The Court held that the note was usurious, but that the penalty was forfeiture of the interest actually taken only, or in other words, that the act of Congress superseded the State law, and directed the jury to so bring in their verdict. There was no written opinion, Hon. Judge MULLIN presiding.

Allow me to add that three similar decisions have already been given in this State.

DANIEL G. FORT, Cashier.

On the Exchange to-day the sales of Gold were advanced from 1st to 132¾ ⅌ cent., and the impression appears to be that an organized Bull movement to advance the price was uttered upon yesterday, and although then not decidedly successful, was followed up this morning. The sales were 132¾@¾,@¾,@¾ ⅌ cent. The movement was favored by the nominal rates of interest paid for carrying over Gold balances, owing to the light supply of the cash Gold, outside this Bull party, on the Street, and it was also encouraged late in the day by some reaction in the quotations of United States bonds abroad. The Foreign Exchanges show no alteration from yesterday, London 60 days 109¾@109¾ ⅌ cent.

The Money market was fairly active at 7 ⅌ cent. on Railway and Miscellaneous collateral, with exceptions at 6 ⅌ cent. in the Public Funds. A good many of the Banks pleaded poverty to their dealers, but this is not the general rule, and even if it were, the private balances offered on the Street are, as yet, sufficiently important to keep the market steady at 7 ⅌ cent., though strictly subject to call.

In the Public Funds there was not a large business. The prices of yesterday were, with some exceptions, maintained, but there was decided speculation to impart buoyancy to the market, although $2,000,000 will be wanted for the Sinking Fund at noon to-morrow. In the Southern State Bonds, the new North Carolinas were a trifle better and the new Tennessees steady. There is more doing in some of the old Railway Mortgage Bonds at previous quotations. The New-York and Western Railway Stocks were again on the decline, and the speculation in nearly all descriptions manifested increased weakness, as the following quotations at the close of business in the Afternoon sufficiently manifest. The Gold Room speculation, on the contrary, left off firm; Foreign Exchange steady; the Public Funds dull in movement, but steady in prices:

We regret to learn that the old and respectable commission house of Messrs. STARIN & FLOYD, in the domestic produce line, has been forced to suspend, in consequence of severe losses incidental to its business, extending back for more than a year. With a view to the protection of its creditors, cash and all alike, the firm has made an assignment to Mr. SAMUEL EDMONSTON, merchant, of Duane-street. It is hoped that the house will be enabled to make such an arrangement of its affairs as will permit of its early resumption of trade.

The attention of Bond buyers is directed to the advertisements of the Gold Loans 6 ⅌ cents of the Rochester Water Works Company, due 1899, URBAT & DOUGHERTY, Bankers, No. 11 Wall-street, and of the 10 ⅌ cent. Currency Loan of the County of Buchanan, Missouri, Messrs. TANNER & Co., Bankers, No. 40 Wall-street.

Internal Revenue Decision.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
WASHINGTON, Aug. 19, 1869.

SIR: I reply to your letter of the 14th inst., that upon every assignment of a mortgage a stamp tax is required equal to that imposed upon a mortgage for the amount remaining unpaid. This tax is required upon every such transfer in writing, whether there is a sale of the mortgage or not. (Series 5, No. 10, last paragraph, page 18.)

The fact that the transfer is made by order of Court does not relieve it, any more than in the case of a deed made under a judgment.

It would be proper to stamp it, either in the district where the property is situated, or where the holder resides.

Very respectfully, J. W. DOUGLASS, Deputy Commissioner.

G. L. FORD, Esq., Collector Internal Revenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

In Philadelphia, yesterday, an insane young man named MARSHALL H. EVANS shot and killed his father, THOMAS L. EVANS, an old man aged sixty-three, in his own home, No. 306 South Tenth-street, not far from the scene of the famous Twitchell murder. The father was about to leave the house to consult with the family physician regarding the son's condition and to suggest his removal to an asylum.

The amount stolen from the Farmers' Bank of Attica, at Batavia, last week, was between $10,000 and $12,000, chiefly in bonds and notes. Among the former was one Genesee County bond of $500—No. 1,267, one mortgage given by C. H. CHESIE of $1,500, and among the latter notes to the amount of $2,000 belonging to the estate of DANIEL P. WAITE, M. W. HAY, administrator.

The Oneonta morning passenger train on the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad was thrown from the track yesterday morning, about a mile from a place known as Brimmer's Station, by running into a couple of horses. Financial Policy of the Administration.

Thus far in his Administration of the Government President GRANT has not set forth, in an official form, the policy by which he is governed when acting upon fiscal affairs. This utterance cannot reasonably be expected prior to the meeting of Congress in December next. In his Annual Message, and in the Report of the Secretary of the Treasury, we may expect to see a clear and full development of the policy of the President: and in the subsequent acts of Congress that policy will be aided, strengthened, and, perhaps, modified.

In the meantime the acts of the Administration enable us to form decided views of its policy and intentions. First, the President evidently intends to pay off the "Five-twenties" as rapidly as he may in gold. Secondly, in order to be able to make this payment soon, the President is laboring to largely appreciate the credit of the Government;—he is struggling to lift its securities to the level of the securities of the wealthiest European States. When this end is measurably attained, the President will be able to negotiate a loan at par in gold, at 4 or 4½ per cent., with the proceeds of which to pay off twelve or fifteen hundred millions of the public debt; thus, by a mere saving in the rate of interest, lessening our annual payments of interest, in gold, $35,000,000 or $30,000,000. Thirdly, to enable him to build up the Government credit and lessen the interest upon the public debt, the President has sedulously and with success labored to collect the revenues without loss or waste, and with less expense; also to introduce a rigid economy into every branch of the public service. Great savings have been realized in the Military and Treasury branches; creditable savings in the State and Interior Departments have been effected, and considerable savings are hoped for from the Navy and Post Office.

So far as the current movements of the Treasury are concerned, until the crops are moved, it is not likely Treasury gold will be sold for currency to be locked up. The entire surplus of currency in the Treasury, on the contrary, will be employed in the purchase of bonds as heretofore, that money may be abundant and cheap at the time crops are to be paid for and moved by transporters to market. And it may be that further purchases of bonds will be made directly with gold. At a time of the year so critical to producers, the President will not withdraw currency from the channels of trade and commerce; he will not send gold into the market and sell it for currency to lock up in the Treasury vaults. Such a procedure would reduce the value of our entire products; to buy and lock up our currency now, and thus make money scarce and dear, would distress all of the producers of the country, and benefit nobody but usurers and speculators. This error will not be committed. No Administration can desire a money panic, and, as a consequence, low prices for produce, upon the eve of the Fall elections.

The policy of the President is, then, as revealed by his acts, to appreciate the values of all Government securities preparatory to the making of an effort to lessen the rates of interest on the Public Debt—to honestly collect the revenues—to reduce expenditures. This policy, if successful, will enable the Administration to place our finances upon a solid foundation, and to reduce the taxes.

Such is the financial policy of the President, as developed by his acts. It is at once simple and efficient. By strengthening our credit we carry our bonds to par in gold; by becoming able to obtain money at 4 or 4½ per cent. we can save 1½ or 2 per cent. per year upon our whole debt. Contests between Government and bondholders are likely to lessen the value of bonds and destroy our hope of reducing the rate of interest from 6 to 4 per cent. per annum. The policy of the President is wisest and best. It is honest, simple, and statesmanlike. It will succeed if adhered to and vigorously maintained.

A Word of Caution about Cuba.

The Pays, an official or semi-official journal in Paris, gives what purport to be the terms of an arrangement now pending before the Spanish Government for the termination of its rule in Cuba, and we presume, as a natural consequence, in Porto Rico. They are as follows:

"1. Spain shall recognize the independence of Cuba under the Government of CESPEDES.

2. Cuba shall pay to Spain an indemnity for the resignation of the rights hitherto exercised by the mother country. The amount of this indemnity to be specified in the treaty.

3. The indemnity, whether fixed at one hundred millions, fifty millions, or twenty-five millions of dollars, to be in bonds of the Cuban Government, payable with interest at the expiration of a convenient period.

4. These bonds to be guaranteed by the United States.

5. An armistice to be proclaimed between the patriots and the Spanish troops in Cuba, immediately upon the execution of the treaty. The island to be evacuated by the Spanish forces as soon as the treaty is ratified by the representatives of the Cuban people, and the guarantee of the bonds approved by the Congress of the United States.

6. If these terms are not at once accepted by the Spanish Government, the United States will without further delay recognize the independence of Cuba."

While it seems to be conceded that the Administration has encouraged the impression that it would lend its friendly offices in this or in any other more available way to bring about a peaceable recognition of the independence of Cuba, there is still a clamor in certain quarters for an immediate concession of belligerent rights to the revolters. We hope and believe the President will turn a deaf ear to all such appeals. Such a concession would in no respect diminish the duties of neutrality, while it would render neutrality itself impossible. It would be regarded as an encouragement by the Cuban sympathizers, who would swarm to such an extent at our seaports as to render any efforts to control them unavailing.

Spain might not find in the concession a cause for war, but she could easily find one in the expeditions which would follow it; and though she is too poor and weak to make war, it is not so certain that she is either too weak or too wise to declare war.

Enraged and desperate, with no commerce to lose, and mortified by the loss of her colonies, and the manner of it, why should she not declare war? Would not every proud Castilian call for war?

Two-thirds of our commerce is still in foreign bottoms where the Alabama drove it, and a few fast steamers from the ports of England and France, with letters of marque and the Spanish flag, would soon dispose of the other third. We have not and never had a single vessel afloat to follow up such craft; and with Europe neutral, refusing us hospitality, and sympathizing with our adversary, Mr. BOUTWELL's surplus, of which we have indulged such fond hopes, would not suffice to blockade a single Spanish port.

With a declaration of war, a commercial panic and a call for a new loan, what would be the effect of our credit at home and abroad and upon the industry and affairs of the country generally, aggravated as the situation would be by the falling off in the gold revenue?

We cannot hurt Spain, but she could hurt us, and why should she not if we needlessly mortify her and take advantage of her calamities?

There is another class of considerations which address themselves more especially to the political partisans of the Administration, and which counsel patience, and, for the present at least, "a masterly inactivity."

Meantime, every European influence is working now, for the first time, in favor of a separation of Spain from her North American colonies. Why paralyze those influences by a filibustering policy which we have been for years denouncing in every Press, pulpit and forum in the land, and against which we are making claims for indemnity against one of the most powerful Empires in the world? Let us try and be logical, even if we are not prudent.

A Plea for a Debased Negro Rule.

A very striking statement, combined with a still more remarkable argument, comes to us from South Carolina. In 1869, says the Charleston News, the twelve Cotton States "will show more true prosperity than any other section of the world." It goes on to estimate the crop of cotton for the present year, which it fixes at 3,000,000 bales. The average value of all the crops will amount to $64 per head of the population. Every one will be glad to learn that the States in which we have often been told all industries were extinguished, are already making such rapid progress toward a recovery of their former position.

Our contemporary carries his statistics a little more into detail. Assuming that he has taken the necessary pains to insure accuracy, there is great reason to congratulate South Carolina on the falsification of the melancholy predictions which have long been uttered respecting her. She will, we are told, yield products this year worth $50,000,000, or an average of $74 63 per head in a population of 670,000, and all this, he adds, disparagingly, "under debasing negro rule." We can only say that the State appears to flourish very well under the infliction. It seems to suit her. We were given to understand that there would be no more cultivation going on in any part of the State when once negroes obtained the ascendancy. Has this prophecy been justified by events? If the Charleston logic is worth anything, we must all agree that it makes out a very strong case for the negroes.

There is another fact mentioned by the same writer which must have taken most Southern people by surprise. "There are now no less than 200,000 whites cultivating cotton with their own hands." This statement is not qualified in any way—we are not even told, what doubtless is the fact, that the whites thus employed in cotton-growing are at work on the uplands. But the time is by no means remote when we were positively assured that white labor never could be extensively used in South Carolina. To argue against the assertion was to expose oneself to unlimited obloquy. What do we find now? That one-third of the population of South Carolina are actively engaged in the very work which it was believed the negro was specially created to perform. The negro alone, and in an enslaved condition, was deemed equal to the cultivation of cotton. He would never work as a freeman. Every one of these anticipations has proved erroneous. The white man can grow cotton if he likes, and the negro is very willing to work if any one will pay him proper wages. South Carolina will settle the cotton controversy in England if she continues to advance at her present rate. The inferior staple grown in India will not hold the market even against the "short" staple of South Carolina, and, in the face of such competition, the English Government will scarcely think it worth while to expend money for the encouragement of cotton-growing in their Eastern Empire.

Mr. Andrew Johnson and State Debts.

There are not wanting indications of a disposition on the part of the Democracy again to make repudiation an issue in national politics. It was an element in the policy which SEYMOUR and BLAIR were nominated to sustain. It is a distinctive feature of the canvass now going on in Ohio, with Mr. PENDLETON as its consistent representative; and it is favored with more or less positiveness by almost the entire Democratic Press west of the Alleghanies, and by a not inconsiderable portion of it in the East.

Ex-President JOHNSON proposes so to widen the issue that it shall take in repudiation generally. In his opinion, it is not enough that the national credit be dishonored. Embarked in a crusade for what he calls "the salvation of the Republic," he entreats his copatriots to "let the debt go." And so, from his point of view, the wiping out of indebtedness is one of the first steps on the road to prosperity, he not unnaturally suggests that the programme be extended to his own State. If repudiation is a good thing—he may be supposed to argue—there cannot be too much of it. At any rate, he urges that a beginning be made with Tennessee. In his Knoxville speech, the other day, after insisting that "the repudiation of the national debt is inevitable," he is reported to have "intimated, regarding Tennessee, that the State debt will probably go by the board."

But on the latter point ANDREW JOHNSON speaks only for himself. As a repudiator of national obligations, he is in cordial accord with the Democratic Party. When, however, in his anxiety for effect, he proposes to enlarge the area of dishonesty until it embraces the debt of the State to which he owes his political existence, he stands alone. Mr. PENDLETON never proposed to blot out the war debt of Ohio. The Indiana Democrats, who are ardent disciples of the Ohio candidate, never ventured to hint at cleaning off with a sponge the war obligations of their State. Yet the doctrine of convenience, which Mr. JOHNSON relies upon for extenuation in the case of Tennessee, might with equal propriety have been applied to every other State which has the claims of creditors to encounter. But it has not been hinted at until now. The infamy of suggesting it belongs exclusively to Mr. JOHNSON.

The Ex-President, moreover, gives vent only to his mischievous and malignant spirit,—not to the inclinations or purposes of the people of Tennessee. They have just passed through the exciting ordeal of an election, but on neither side was repudiation of the State debt, or any portion of it, threatened. On the contrary, both the friends of SENTER and the friends of STOKES pronounced decidedly in favor of upholding with scrupulous care the public credit, local and national. Only since the election has the idea been broached, and by a man from whose touch in the canvass the victorious SENTER shrunk as from a leper.

The pretence set up by Mr. JOHNSON is that the nineteen millions and a half of State indebtedness which he would "let go by the board," is the creation of the Government organized since the rebellion. It is against the financial honor of the State as reconstructed that he pretends to concentrate his attack. The absurdity and injustice of this attempt to discriminate in a war of repudiation are clearly proved by Mr. FLETCHER, the Tennessee Secretary of State, whose letter we published yesterday. He shows that more than six millions of the indebtedness specifically assailed—nearly one-third of the whole amount—represents bonds issued in exchange for old bonds, which matured during and since the rebellion, and which the local Government was unable to discharge in any other way. Again nearly four millions and a half were issued "in aid of solvent and responsible railroad companies, who pay their interest without difficulty." The remainder "was issued to railroad companies who fail to pay interest," and most of whom are now in the hands of receivers; the probable loss to the State being estimated at three millions.

The allegation behind which Mr. JOHNSON tries to hide himself—namely, that the debt he would repudiate was incurred for unconstitutional purposes by a Government constitutionally invalid—cannot be sustained. The bonds issued in substitution for bonds of ante-war date cannot be confounded with the question of reconstruction. As for the other securities, Mr. FLETCHER tells us that "they were issued in aid of peace and commerce, and to build up and enrich" the State.

These considerations, however, have no legitimate connection with the repudiation policy as propounded by the Knoxville orator. Whether the objects served by the issue of bonds were warlike or peaceful is a point which does not enter into the controversy. They were issued by the Government of the State under authority conferred by the Legislature, which acted within constitutional limits; and that is enough. With the thrift or the extravagance of the State in its policy of internal improvements, neither the Government nor the creditor has anything to do. The obligations have been incurred. Securities issued lawfully by the Government were bought in good faith by the holders; and there the business ends.

Mr. FLETCHER assigns three reasons why the Ex-President's threat should cause no alarm. "First, and above all, because the people of Tennessee are too proud and too honest" to become parties to repudiation; second, "because there is not the shadow of justification for it;" third, because the bonds are collectable in the Federal Courts. The first of these reasons is sufficient. A proud and honest people cannot be seduced by demagogues or tempted by partisan considerations to commit an act of robbery. They will prefer taxation to dishonesty and disgrace.

The demonstration made by Mr. JOHNSON occurs opportunely for one purpose. It shows that if the national debt is to be assailed, as by the Democrats it is, the State debts will not be safe. There would be no stopping place for repudiation if it were begun.

We do not suppose that JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, who has again been nominated by the Democracy for Governor of Massachusetts, has any very great expectation of being elected,—even though he may be supposed to have a better prospect than he had last year, on account of the Liquor Prohibition question, which disturbs the Republican Party. There have been attempts to bring about a union between the organized "Liquor" interest and the Democracy, but it has not been effected, and it would, in any event, result in failure. In the Republican Party there are two factions,—one of which desires the nomination of an anti-prohibition candidate, while the other is determined to secure a prohibition candidate. The party is so strong in Massachusetts that it is confident of success, whoever may be its nominee.

This is the third time, successively, in which JOHN QUINCY ADAMS has been nominated for the Governorship of his native State by the Democracy. Though badly beaten twice, he has not yet been discouraged from further efforts. He has had no experience in public life, except for a single term as a member of the Lower House of the State Legislature. But during his Gubernatorial canvass last year, and especially during the Southern tour in which he gave so much good advice to the people of the South, he showed himself possessed of a measure of intellect, independence and courage not unworthy the son of our late distinguished Minister to England, and the descendant of the two Presidents of the United States, who were leaders of our two great historical movements, one for national independence and the other for universal freedom.

It would surprise the world very much if England turned Protectionist in her commercial policy, and renounced Free Trade as a "gigantic mistake." But nothing less than this is the aim sought for by a society recently established in England. There can be no doubt that Protection views are really making some little way in England, although the vast majority of the people are decidedly opposed to them. So good an authority as Mr. BASLEY, Chairman of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, thought it necessary in his annual speech this year to argue at some length against the apparent resurrection of Protectionism. The society to which we refer has already held twenty-one meetings in the metropolis, and they allege that trade and industry in England have declined through the "want of a prohibitive duty on articles of foreign manufacture, imported into England by countries which will not admit duty free similar articles of British manufacture." In fact, English workmen have been injured by what Mr. DISRAELI once called a "one-sided reciprocity." Ever since 1854 the imports into England have been exceeding the exports, until in 1868 the excess of imports over exports was £116,000,000. The Chairman of the Association recently stated that England had been systematically fostering the interest of the foreigner in preference to her own. "Everything," he said, "from a child's toy to a steam engine was now being made in foreign countries and exported to England." He added: "Give us protection, and in forty-eight hours every working man in England would be employed." About the ultimate fate of this movement we need not enter into any speculations, but it is a very curious and noteworthy fact in political history that after free trade has been in operation so many years in England, a party, however small, should come forward and demand a revival of Protection. We do not see precisely how these gentlemen expect to recover their position in foreign markets by closing their own to the products of foreign markets.

Lord STANLEY has been making some remarks, at an agricultural dinner, on tenant farming, or peasant proprietorships, which, like most observations coming from the same quarter, have attracted general attention and discussion. His argument is this:—Farming is becoming more and more a business of a scientific nature, requiring costly implements and machinery, and consequently capital, in order to render it successful. Now if small cultivators with limited means undertake to till the soil, how are they to carry on their operations? They could not buy machinery. Hand labor would be substituted for machinery, and this would be a retrogression in farming—not going forward, but going backward. The following passage is worth notice:

"I think that our three-fold system of landlord, tenant and laborer is economically the best and most productive; and if the tenant be guarded, as I think he always ought to be, when he deserves it, by leases and agreements fairly framed in the interest of both parties, I see nothing in this system which involves any other dependence than the system of not one-sided, but mutual dependence, which must and ought to exist in a civilized country between each class and every other class."

The Times (London) utters a cry of rejoicing over these sentiments, for very naturally it is uniformly consistent in its support of the landed interest. But both Lord STANLEY and the Times overlook the fact that in Belgium the soil is to a great extent tilled by small holders, and that the system has answered perfectly. Machinery is not so much required on small farms as on large ones, and a peasant proprietary at least gives employment to a larger number of persons than farms upon which machinery has almost superseded hand labor. The popular sentiment in England is tending strongly toward the system of small holdings, and we doubt whether all the orators or spokesmen of the existing landed interest will be able to keep this movement in check many years longer. The experiment which Lord STANLEY deprecates will certainly be tried in Ireland, and that with the consent of all the Liberal statesmen of the day. Can it be supposed that so great an innovation will have no reflex action upon England?

The organized workingmen represented in the Labor Congress will doubtless secure a large increase of their strength and importance through the proceedings of that body last week. The preparations which they made for better organization and more vigorous action during the year will show their results at the next meeting; and, in the meantime, the discussion of their projects will help them in giving practical form to their plans. "By-and-by," says the Pall Mall Gazette, in speaking of labor movements, "we shall probably find that this is really the great political question of our time and generation," and "certainly at this moment there is no question so important as the development of trade-unionism in England, industrial agitation in France, and an even newer and more sudden growth of workingmen's association in America, to say nothing of Belgium and other small communities."

A Western paper is troubled because Minister SICKLES took with him to Spain "three attachés." "We have to support this establishment," says our Western contemporary, "which shows how the one hundred millions of dollars, that ought to be applied toward the payment of our debt, is squandered." This is very impressive language. But suppose, what is the fact, that in "supporting this establishment," we do not pay anything at all to these "three attachés?" And suppose that neither of them gets a single dollar of the "three hundred millions,"—what then?

We published the other day the affidavit upon which an order of arrest against General DIX was granted at the suit of JOHN MITCHELL. We are authorized to say that MITCHELL was arrested and sent to Fortress Monroe in June, 1865, by order of the Government, and that General DIX had nothing to do with his confinement there. As no suit can be brought against the United States, MITCHELL has doubtless sought to test the legality of his arrest by a suit against the officer who obeyed the order to arrest him.

By our exchanges from different parts of the country, we notice that preparations are being made in hundreds of cities and towns for the celebration of the Humboldt Centenary in September.

INCIDENTALS.

Secretary BOUTWELL has promised to be present at the Georgia State Fair, to be held in Macon in November.

The first volume of the diplomatic correspondence, which will soon be published, will contain the correspondence between WASHBURN and LOPEZ, a statement of the condition of our relations with Mexico, the condition of affairs in Japan, and a partial history of our late diplomatic relations with Spain and France.

The great yield of wheat and the financial necessities of the farmers is causing a wonderful movement of grain into Toledo and other centres, the warehouses of the city named having for a few days past received about 100,000 bushels daily.

The Boston Post indulges in a little sarcasm at the expense of the Harvard crew. It says that having now got seated in their British boat, and taken British oars into their hands, possibly, if they pay strict attention to British advice and critics, they may find the very place in the race to which British preference would assign them. There is but one thing left to them, it adds, and that is to take up with British diet just as it might be ordered for them. In spite of all this, however, it still holds fast to its faith in Harvard muscle and wind, and expresses the hope that Oxford "will come out of the contest as badly blown as it deserves."

The Chicago Republican is alarmed at what it terms the widespread scheme to organize a national party to place Chief Justice CHASE in the Presidential chair, and thinks that as no time has it been so incumbent upon the Republicans to abstain from entangling alliances, and to draw party lines strictly, for "treachery is in the camp and ambuscade lines our way."

Governor SMITH, of Alabama, denies that the Republicans of Mobile or any other persons petitioned him to establish martial law in that city after the late riot.

A correspondent of the Rochester Union proposes to remedy the defects of our judicial system by making the whole State one election district—or, in other words, by electing all the Judges on a general ticket. The Rochester Democrat thinks that when the Democrats carried the State the character of the Bench would not be elevated.

Hon. LYNDON OAK, one of the temperance candidates for the Maine State Senate, has declined the nomination, as, while he sympathizes most earnestly with the Prohibitionists, he is unable to see how the cause of temperance or prohibition is to be promoted by allowing himself to divert votes from the regular Republican candidate, who holds the same views as himself.

It is estimated that the value of boots and shoes manufactured in Massachusetts the present year will exceed $65,000,000. The wholesale dealers in Boston are forming a Shoe and Leather Dealers' Exchange. Since Jan. 1 nearly 800,000 cases of goods have been shipped from that city, an excess of fully thirty-three per cent. over the corresponding period last year.

The Executive Committee of the Virginia State Agricultural Society held a public meeting at White Sulphur Springs last week, and were addressed by Hon. HENRY CLIMER, of Pennsylvania, who contrasted the state of agriculture in his own State and Virginia, and earnestly recommended smaller farms in the latter. Addresses were also made by General LAWTON, of Alabama, Hon. D. W. BARRINGER, of North Carolina, and others.

In view of the new combinations and new schemes in the political world, the Detroit Free Press, the leading Democratic paper in Michigan, reminds its friends that success cannot be secured by them or rendered even probable without the display of more wisdom than was exhibited in the National Convention at Chicago in 1864, or at New-York in 1868, and that, from this time forward, the party, wherever it is in power, must look well to the character and standing of the men it places in nomination.

Boston has a well-organized system for the distribution of flowers to the sick, the idea of which was suggested by a little girl. Inquiries are now made in that city whether some similar arrangement cannot be made to secure the distribution of fruit among the poorer classes.

A young man sued out a writ of habeas corpus in Pittsburg, Penn., on Saturday, for his wife, whom he declared to be restrained of her liberty by her father. It appears that they were married clandestinely one evening and the young girl returned to her father's house. Her father alleged that his daughter was entirely free to follow her own inclination, and the daughter said that she was led to marry the petitioner by his threats to shoot her if she did not consent. The wife is under age, and the Court ordered the writ to be dismissed at the cost of the petitioner.

BLAGQUE BEY, the Turkish Minister, gave a dinner party, at White Sulphur Springs, Va., on Thursday last, at which Generals LEE, BEAUREGARD, and others were present.

In a trial at Owensboro, Ky., on Saturday, BAKER BOYD, the prosecuting attorney, made a statement respecting Congressman WILLIAM H. SWEENEY, counsel for the defence. The latter promptly pronounced the statement an absolute lie, and at the same instant struck BOYD with a knife, inflicting a wound four inches long on the right breast. The wound is painful, but not dangerous. The Court was adjourned on account of the confusion caused by the disturbance.

WASHINGTON.

The Fifteenth Amendment—Concern Regarding the Action by Tennessee—Americans Abroad and the Income Tax—The Call for Bank-Note Paper—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Washington politicians here are discussing the chances of the adoption or rejection of the Fifteenth Constitutional Amendment. The probable action of Tennessee, which a few months ago was counted on as certain for ratification, is canvassed with some earnestness and anxiety, although the majority of Republicans incline to the opinion that she will go as it was at first supposed she would. STOKES, however, is very confident and positive that she will reject it, and when reminded that SENTER is pledged to its ratification, he is still incredulous. He says that SENTER talks publicly in favor of it, but that privately he is on the other side. STOKES' proposition to convene an extra session of Congress is laughed at by every one, and there is not the slightest probability that the President will be induced to do anything of the kind.

AMERICANS ABROAD AND THE INCOME TAX.

Mr. MURPHY, our Consul at Frankfort-on-Main, has written a letter to Commissioner DELANO calling his attention to the large number of Americans living in Germany who have large investments in United States bonds, and who make no income returns; also, to the large number of naturalized citizens residing in the same country who evade the payment of taxes in the same manner.

REVENUE MATTERS.

It is understood that Judge BUSTEED has issued a summons to show cause why a Collector of Internal Revenue should not be enjoined from collecting revenue tax, returnable at his Chambers in Jamaica, Long Island.

BANK-NOTE PAPER—THE NEW NOTES.

The New-York Bank-note Companies continue to make favorable promises to the Treasury Department in reference to the printing, but seem to be unable to give the Government sufficient supply. They are now forwarding to the Treasury Department about $40,000 per day, but $200,000 at least is required to meet immediate demands from all parts of the country. About $75,000 is required for issue in place of the mutilated currency redeemed. The designs for the new $5, $10, $20 and $50 legal-tender notes have not yet been determined upon.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENTS.

Captain SHAW, Marshal of the London (England) Fire Brigade, arrived here this afternoon. The Assistant Secretary of State, at the request of the British Minister, has written a letter to the Chief Engineer of the Washington Fire Department, in which he states Captain SHAW's visit to be "For the purpose of studying the arrangements which are carried out by the fire departments of the United States."

GRANITE FOR THE NEW YORK POST OFFICE.

Mr. MULLETT, the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, has gone to Westchester, N. Y., to examine the granite quarries of Mr. WILLIAMS, the lowest bidder for granite for the new Post Office in New-York City.

The Humboldt Celebration.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Will you permit me, through the columns of your paper, to call upon those American and foreign corporations, institutes, societies, &c., in the City of New-York and vicinity, who wish to participate in the procession and other festivities connected with the celebration of the one hundredth birthday of ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT, on the 14th of September, and who have not yet been reached by direct invitation, to communicate with the Committee, by addressing the undersigned Secretary?

It is the earnest desire of the Committee to render the celebration of this memorable day universal and cosmopolitan in character, and to afford to all, and each, an opportunity of paying homage to the memory of a great man.

Yours, very respectfully,

The International Race—Chart of the Thames.

In view of the great interest felt in the approaching international boat race between Harvard and Oxford Universities, to take place on Friday next, an illustrated map of the River Thames has been prepared and issued by the American News Company. The map shows the entire course to be rowed over by the contending crews, with the various windings of the stream, the bridges to be passed, and marks out the points which have become historic in the annals of boat racing. It will prove of great assistance to EUROPEAN NEWS BY MAIL.

ARRIVAL OF THE CUBA AND CITY OF PARIS.

The steamships Cuba and City of Paris, with advices to Aug. 11, arrived at this port yesterday.

A terrible case of crime has come before the Assize Court of the Bouches-du-Rhône, in France. The Curé of the village of Beaux and his female servant are accused of murder, the husband of the latter being the victim. The acte d'accusation, or indictment, is published in the French papers, but no report of the evidence has yet appeared.

The Etoile, of Brussels, says that among the working classes of that city there is great excitement just now on the subject of the kidnapping of children. Some time ago, it seems, the papers published an account of the arrest of a Princess accused of killing children in order to bathe in their blood for the purpose of preserving her beauty. This absurd invention took such hold of the popular imagination that within the last few days several persons—among them two Englishmen—who have accidentally spoken to children in the street, have incurred the suspicion of being kidnappers, and have been subjected to very rough usage by the crowd which at once collected.

M. JULIEN LEMERA, French bookseller, writes to the Paris papers that, being about to publish an illustrated biography of eminent men, he sent proofs of the portraits to the Ministry of the Interior, in order to obtain the permission required by law for any "engraving" or "drawing." He was told that no answer could be given until he produced the text of the biography. This he refused to do, and thereupon the Minister declined to give him permission to publish the portraits, which in themselves were unobjectionable. This is an indirect attempt to revive the censorship of books, which the law does not allow.

AFFAIRS IN SPAIN.

The Truth About the Carlist Movement—The Insurgents Being Hunted up Everywhere—Wholesale Military Executions—Severe Decree Against the Clergy—Arrival of the Porto Rico Deputation in Madrid, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Monday, Aug. 9, 1869.

The Carlist movement continues to droop, notwithstanding the operations of the French Press, and especially the Correspondance Lithographié de Bayonne, a Carlist paper published in Paris. The most unblushing falsehoods and exaggerations have been put forward by the latter. Thus a few days after the first action in La Mancha, when the Carlist leader, SARABREGOS, was defeated by the troops sent against him from Ciudad Real, it stated that he had 800 men and 1,200 horses at his disposal, when the truth was that his party was split up into four or five small bands, each flying with the utmost precipitation to the mountains. From the testimony of some of his men who presented themselves at Ciudad Real supplicating for pardon, we learn that on the 28th of July, three days after the defeat, this chief separated himself from his men altogether, and with his two sons made good his escape in the direction of Portugal. The same French paper coolly stated the other day that "Toledo and Avila had pronounced, that the Civil Guards in Estremadura had fraternized with the Carlists," and that the troops under Government-General BALDRICH, in Catalonia, had made common cause with those of the Carlist leader, TRISTANY, and that the latter consequently found himself at the head of an imposing force. There was not a word of truth in all this! Nothing could be more loyal to the revolution than the conduct of both Civil Guards and troops, and as to the much-dreaded TRISTANY, he was not in Catalonia at all! "The Carlists are in possession of Navarre," says the Correspondance, in one of its latest issues. The truth is, that even in that northern Province, which has always been supposed to incline toward the doctrine of divine right, they have not even been able to get a footing. In Navarre, La Mancha, Ciudad Real, Pampeluna and Leon—everywhere, in fact, where they have appeared, they have been compelled to fly before their pursuers. They avoid actual encounters if they can, but in every one of these that have taken place, they have been worsted, and have left their dead and wounded on the field. The desultory kind of warfare which they have commenced, if warfare it may be called, has never admitted of any large bodies of men being brought into action at a given moment, save in the skirmish at Piedrabuena, when it is said the Carlists numbered over 600. It is a remarkably bloodless campaign so far as the Government troops are concerned, for up to the present time only one officer and two soldiers have been killed in the dozens of petty skirmishes which have taken place.

THE EXECUTION OF PRISONERS.

The Government has exposed itself to general censure for the unnecessary reëstablishment of the martial law of April 17, 1821, which takes the trial of conspirators found with arms in hand from the jurisdiction of the ordinary judicial tribunals, and delegates it to the tender mercies of Councils of War, with the imperative provision that the sentences passed must be carried out within twenty-four hours. Already the victims of this cruel and cowardly enactment accumulate, and their blood not only stains the hands of their executioners, but the fair fame of the revolution. The first individuals shot in this summary manner were two poor fellows who formed part of the Carlist band under the cura of Alcedon, one of the many "fighting parsons" now in the field. This band having been attacked and defeated at Iglesuela, near Ciudad Real, fled, headed by their brave clerical leader. The two unfortunate men in question, not having as long legs as their comrades, were caught, tried and shot within half the period of delay prescribed by the law.

The cura of Alcedon, their leader, has once been caught, but we have not as yet heard of his execution. Possibly it may be deemed sacrilege to shoot a priest. At the last accounts he had been conveyed to Toledo for trial, the jail at the place where he was captured being too insecure to hold him. His name is DON LUCIO DE DUENAS. He is upward of 60 years of age. He took an active part in the former seven years' Carlist war, and was at one time in prison in Guadalajara, but was subsequently released. He is not likely to be in a position to shoulder the musket again.

But the most wholesale of these summary executions seems to have taken place at Montealegre. An officer named CABALLE, commanding a body of troops sent in pursuit of the Carlists in Catalonia, thus telegraphs to the Government: "Faction beaten in the neighborhood of Montealegre. Nine prisoners, with arms in hand, shot immediately after. In our possession one horse, some boinas, (Carlist caps,) arms and other effects.—JOSE CABALLE." The inference is that these nine men were shot without trial! It is to be hoped that this impression may turn out to be incorrect, though it is just what some of these officers in command of flying columns would be likely unreflectingly to do.

THE CLERGY IN THE MOVEMENT.

On the whole it may be said that the entire movement has proved abortive, for the present at all events, though from his secure shelter in France DON CARLOS announces that he intends to "renew operations" very shortly. That the movement might have been more formidable, and to use proper there can be no doubt. The extraordinary simultaneous discovery of the various Carlist conspiracies throughout the country, Madrid included, shows the extent of the plot, and the general implication of the clergy in it was conclusive as to its danger, considering the moral influence of the priests over the minds of the people, especially in the agricultural and mountainous districts. In my former letters I have shown how different the Roman Catholic clergy of Spain are to the Roman Catholic clergy of the United States or England. If is no disparagement to the latter to express one's opinion fairly as to the conduct of their brethren here. The two classes of men cannot for a moment be compared. The Catholic priest in Spain is a low, cringing, crafty, factious individual, arrogant in the assumption of infallibility, and utterly opposed to all educational and political progress. He writhes and chafes under the new order of things which the revolution has brought about, and pines for the day when the cause of DON CARLOS, that true son of the Church, shall have achieved a triumphing, so as to strike out the freedom of worship clauses from the Constitution, expel the "heretics," and restore the priesthood to the power and influence it formerly exercised over the affairs of the nation. He lacks entirely the piety, the self-sacrificing charity, the love of order, the respect to the powers that be, the liberality and the large-heartedness of the Catholic priest of the United States or Great Britain. Besides all this, he is in Spain an immense "physical power" in the State. From Archbishops and Bishops downward to parish priests, monks, sacristans, &c., there are in Spain nearly 140,000 ecclesiastics of one kind or another, and they cost the State nearly $10,000,000 annually. The recent Carlist movement has been mainly fomented and sustained by them. So notorious is this fact, that it has called forth severe comments in the Press, and what makes it worse in this, that the "high clergy," the Bishops and Archbishops, have not one of them uttered a WORD in protesting voice against it.

GOVERNMENT DECREES.

This silence on their part has perhaps imparted a greater impulse to the question of the separation between Church and State in Spain than anything else could possibly do. Not only is it now revived by the journals, but the Government have just issued a decree based on this rebellious attitude of the clergy. It is preceded by a remarkable preamble, in which the Minister expresses deep indignation at the conduct of "many of the clergy who have been so forgetful of their sacred calling as to oppose the progress of the revolution and set themselves up in opposition to the constituted authorities, sustaining the flag of rebellion not only by their counsels and exhortations in the pulpit and elsewhere, but by contributing largely from their personal resources to the Carlist Loan," and by some of them (not a few, either) actually changing the sutan for the military jacket, abandoning their flocks, and taking the field in open rebellion. After this frank introduction, the decree addresses itself not to the minor clergy merely, but to "the Very Reverend the Archbishops and the Very Reverend Bishops of the Roman Catholic Church in Spain." It does not exhort them or entreat them, but it absolutely orders and commands them to do four things "without loss of time and without procrastination or excuse." First, they are "to send in an immediate statement to the Government of all the ecclesiastics in their respective dioceses who have abandoned their churches and launched themselves in opposition to the political situation created by the revolution of September." Secondly, they are, "as soon as they are in possession of the decree, to report to the Government the steps, canonical or otherwise, which they have taken to restrain rebellious priests and to correct them, as also to repair the grave scandals their disloyal conduct has created." Thirdly, they are "to issue pastoral edicts within eight days, enjoining obedience to the constituted authorities on all their clergy and flocks," and "to transmit official copies of them at once to the Minister of Grace and Justice;" and, fourthly, they are "to cancel the preaching and confessing licenses of the notoriously disaffected priests who have not desisted from manifesting an attitude contrary to the constitutional régime.

The decree is dated at San Ildefonso, (La Granja,) 5th August, 1869, and is signed by FRANCISCO SERRANO, Regent of the Kingdom. It remains to be seen how the Episcopal Bench will take it.

ENGLAND.

The Prerogatives of Parliament—The Queen's Speeches—Who Writes Them?—The Laws Relating to Marriage—The Coming Boat Race.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 14, 1869.

Parliament was prorogued on Wednesday. Why do you not import this pretty word for Congress? Prorogued means, asked forward," and is much nicer than adjourned. As at the opening of the session, a message was read from the Queen. It has been said in America that the Queen did not write her own speeches. The theory has been that her Ministers wrote them for her; and some persons have imagined that they could detect a difference between those composed by Mr. GLADSTONE and the Liberal Ministers, and those written by Mr. DISRAELI and the Tories. I have never noticed any such difference.

They are all in the same style, which may be called the style Royal, or the Queen's English. Her Majesty is a successful author, and is quite able to write her own speeches. She is too downright honest a woman to be any party to such a sham as passing off anybody's work as her own. Besides, the Lord Chancellor, the official keeper of the Queen's conscience, a sworn officer of great solemnity, who wears a large white wig, said, upon his official oath: "We are commanded to deliver Her Majesty's most gracious speech, which is as follows." I need not say, also, that Mr. GLADSTONE is a man of too tender a conscience to impose upon anybody. Then the style, as I said, and the very form of expression are Her Majesty's. Her Majesty "announces to you with pleasure," "has a lively satisfaction in acknowledging," "firmly trusts," "has observed with pleasure," "reflects with pleasure," finally, Her Majesty says:

"During the recess you will continue to gather that practical knowledge and experience which forms the basis of legislative aptitude; and Her Majesty invokes the blessing of the Almighty alike upon your recent and your future labors for the public weal."

Now that is too majestic and solemn for any one but Her Majesty; and no one but the Queen would talk in that way about "the solid basis of legislative aptitude," and then ask a blessing to wind up with.

Her Majesty's grammar is, perhaps, a little peculiar, but it is the same, more or less, in all her speeches, whoever may be her Ministers—a sufficient proof that she writes them all herself. For instance, she says:

"In the removal of the duty on corn, Her Majesty sees now evidence of your desire to afford facilities for the free and easy exchange of the products of industry, and to secure to large to the utternost those supplies of food which our insular position in a peculiar degree both encourages and requires."

And where, it may be asked, save in a Royal speech, could one expect to find such paragraphs as the following?

"Her Majesty has a lively satisfaction in acknowledging the untiring zeal and assiduity with which you have prosecuted the arduous labors of the year.

"In the act for putting an end to the Establishment of the Irish Church you have carefully kept in view the several considerations which, at the opening of the session, were commended to your notice.

"It may reasonably be expected that the act for the supervision of habitual criminals will contribute further to the security of life and property."

And so the long, hard session, unprecedented for its late hours, and wear and tear of conscience and constitution, has ended, and the town is empty.

THE MARRIAGE LAWS.

Another of the postponed subjects for legislation is the Marriage laws, set forth on one of the last nights of the overworked Commons by Sir ROUNDELL PALMER. The principle of religious equality, now practically recognized for the first time, three centuries after the Reformation, seems to require some sort of equality, and, if possible, uniformity, in the laws relating to marriage. The laws, as they now exist, Sir ROUNDELL may well call extraordinary. In England people are married by banns or dispensed from them by license. In Church marriages no registrar is required to be present; among nonconformists his attendance is requisite. The Quakers have a separate law all to themselves. If the place where the marriage is celebrated has not been properly consecrated the marriage is invalid. It can only be performed within certain hours—never later than 11 A. M. In Scotland there is marriage by simple consent of the parties; marriages according to three or four different laws, and irregular marriages, which make people liable to a fine; but the payment of the fine legalizes the marriage, and this is a common mode of procedure. In Ireland there is one law for Protestant Churchmen, another for Presbyterians, and no law at all for Catholics, except a law of pains and penalties in certain cases. If a Roman Catholic priest should presume to celebrate a marriage between a Roman Catholic and Protestant, or even between a Roman Catholic and a person who had been a Protestant within a year of the marriage, till comparatively a recent time that was a capital offence, and even now it is a criminal offence of a very high order, and the marriage is absolutely void. Of the irregular Scottish marriages Sir ROUNDELL has the horror that might be expected in an English lawyer and churchman, and his description of them is technical and droll. He says:—

"The system of irregular marriages in Scotland is a very startling thing to those whose minds are not thoroughly accustomed to it. It is contracted in two different ways. Supposed any gentleman in this House visited a house in Scotland where a young lady happened to be staying, and that he and the young lady took a walk together, and in the course of the walk he took a piece of paper out of his pocket on which they wrote down a mutual agreement; though the piece of paper might be simply put back again into his pocket, though nothing might be said to anybody about the writing, and though nobody else might be there at the time, if the persons afterward lived in a certain way together, that would be a valid marriage, although nobody might know of the fact of the marriage for years afterward. No mere promise will constitute a marriage unless it be in writing, and unless subsequente copula. A promise so given and so followed constitutes a good marriage, however long it may be kept secret. There is another even more extraordinary mode, in which no writing at all is necessary, and that is where the promises is made not de futuro, but de presenti—when the woman says, 'I take you, John, for my husband,' and where the man says, 'I take you, Mary, for my wife,' before witnesses. A promise of that kind being brought up at any future period, even although the people have never lived together, will hold good, and will be sufficient to overturn any perfectly honorable and reputable marriage that either of the parties may have subsequently entered into, and this actually occurred in the celebrated Dalrymple case."

THE COMING BOAT RACE.

The NEW-YORK TIMES has been roundly berated by the English Press for intimating that foul play was even a possibility in the approaching boat race. Well, Mr. BOUCICAULT has just brought out a new play at Drury Lane, which turns on a boat race between Oxford and Cambridge, and the means taken by the betting men to insure that Oxford should be beaten. In the play, the plot is defeated, but the idea has evidently dawned upon an English dramatist as well as the New-York journalist, and "all the elements of popular success," the London Times assures us, "are found in 'Formosa,' the new drama. One of those elements, assuredly, must be, at least, a dramatic possibility."

For the boat race, houses and windows are advertised to let, fronting the river. The banks and bridges will be crowded. A hundred steamers will gather at the starting point and follow the rival boats, driving the water in a great swell before them. A huge wave will wash the banks and wet everybody that stands near the water. Those in front will be pushed in by the eagerness of the crowd in their rear, but the boats which will fringe the river will pull them out. Excursion trains will bring half a million of people to see the contest, and London itself, if the day is at all fine, can turn out a million. The great SMITH, manager of Cremorne, the English Mabille, announces a "Ladies' International Complimentary Dress Ball in honor of the Americans' visit to the competition of the great International rowing match," which luckily takes place on his, the said SMITH'S, birthday.

MONADNOCK.

ENGLAND.

Lord Stanley on Public Affairs.

Lord STANLEY presided, on the 12th inst., at the annual dinner of the Ormskirk and Southport Agricultural Society, at Ormskirk yesterday. In proposing the "Army and Navy," he said: "We grumble now and then, and it is only natural, over the four and twenty or five and twenty millions a year which these services cost us. But though they may be, and though they are in one sense, dear to our pockets, they are, in another and a better sense, dear to English hearts, because we remember what they have done and what they can do. We believe they are a necessary, though a costly instrument, and we do not believe there is any economy in neglecting to keep up our insurance. We know that we are rich enough to be wrongly robbing prosperous enough to excite envy, and we ought to be strong enough to make ourselves respected. For our own part, we have, as every body knows, no aggressive designs and no territorial ambition. We are quite content to let our neighbors alone if they will let us alone; but the world does not become wise in a day. War is a very old institution; about the oldest we record, and much as we dislike and detest it, and nobody does so more than I do, we cannot but confess that it is a custom which will absolutely die out in our time. In the meantime to be unarmed is not to disarm other people, but rather to invite aggression. Lord STANLEY, in proposing the toast of the evening, said: It is with real pleasure that I see the number of these local societies increasing, not only here, but also in other parts of the country. They are all the more useful because of the very nature of the business which the Legislature carried on. We all see that farming is becoming every year more and more of a scientific business. Implements are numerous and more effective, mechanical appliances being substituted for human or brute force. One result follows from this, that farming, to be successful, cannot be carried on without a certain amount of capital; and next, I think, it follows that farming cannot in the long run succeed if it is carried on in such a manner as to render the use of mechanical appliances impossible.

CRIME IN FRANCE.

Terrible Charge of Poisoning by a French Priest.

From the London Star, Aug. 13.

A remarkable case will shortly come before the French tribunals, in which the Abbé BROMS, the curé of the parish of Beaux, in the arrondissement of Arles, in the south of France, is accused of having been an accomplice in the murder of the servitor of his church, the actual murderer being the wife of the victim. The acte d'accusation, which forms an important part of French legal proceedings, and which is in fact, a summary of the case for the prosecution, discloses the following facts:

The man whom death is the subject of inquiry, named TOUGAY, a bachelor, and sexton of the parish church, died suddenly on the 10th February, after a short illness. The wife, whose character is alleged to have been far from blameless, had for some time had an illicit connection with an old man named FRANCOIS GROGNARD, but this connection she had apparently abandoned for some time, and the people of the neighborhood attached some significance to her pointed non-visits to the parish church in the spring of 1868. The husband appears to have troubled himself very little about her conduct. When the woman, whose characteristics are well known, entered the service of the curé, some of the parishioners remonstrated with the latter, but he replied that he had been the means of reclaiming the woman from evil courses, and that Jesus Christ himself did not refuse to associate with such. The scandal, however, could not be suppressed, and it did to have gathered weight from the previous life of the curé. The ecclesiastical authorities at length decided on removing him to another parish, and he received an order on the 20th January to repair thither forthwith. He did not, however, do so, but removed to a house which he rented for a short time from M. Blanchon, at no great distance. The death of TOUGAY occurring on the 10th of February, excited suspicion in the minds of those who knew the relations between the widow and the priest. On the 15th March the body was exhumed, and evidence of poisoning by some preparation of copper, probably vitriol, was distinctly traced. The woman at first endeavored to throw the gilt on her former companion, GROGNARD, but the Police soon ascertained that she had purchased poison for rats at a grocer's, and that after her husband's death she had urgently requested him not to mention the fact. After her arrest, she made frequent attempts to murder herself. "My God! if I tell, I shall ruin him." She then told a circumstantial tale, to the effect that she had been the mistress of the priest, and that he had urged her to a frequent observance of all exterior acts of devotion, in order to avert suspicion. After he had grown tired of her, in consequence of his parishioners to dismiss her, the intercourse continued in secret, her visits to the priest's chambers being usually made through the belfry after mass or evening prayer. When he was transferred to another parish, he endeavored to induce her to accompany him as servant, provided that she could obtain a written permission from her husband. As, however, this was not to be obtained, he proposed (according to her statement) that she should poison her husband, promising her full absolution. She at first shrank from the idea, but at length yielded, and was assured by her that nothing was easier; and on the very day when he received the final order to remove from the parish she purchased at two separate grocers' shops a quantity of rat-poison and vitriol, which, according to the instructions of the priest, she administered in a cup of coffee as TOUGAY was about to leave home. Almost as soon as he left the village he was seized with violent symptoms of poisoning, and on being brought home was confined to his bed for some time. The wife appears to have hesitated, but the priest urged her to persevere. By his advice she went to a physician to procure medicine for her husband, but took care that he should not visit the patient to ascertain the real cause of his malady. It is supposed that she subsequently administered some poison to her victim, who died on the 10th of February. The priest seems to have been fully aware that suspicion would fall on him, and he endeavored beforehand to direct attention to the old man GROGNARD. It was, indeed, mainly at his instigation that the body was exhumed. Shortly after the death, a woman first accused the abbé of complicity in her guilt; the latter, on being interrogated, made several inconsistent statements, which he endeavored to retract almost in the same breath, and when brought face to face with his accuser, he remarked to the affrighted "Poor woman, if I could but speak with her alone for a moment, she would retract; I see that she loves me still." Several pieces of circumstantial evidence were adduced to strengthen the case. The remains of the poison were discovered in two places indicated by the woman. Moreover, the latter asserted that she had obtained access to the priest's room by a certain door, which the latter alleges had been bricked up for some years. On examination it was found that this door had only been closed by a very light partition, easily removed. Some workmen, moreover, were discovered, who testified to having met her coming from the house to which the curé removed, at the time specified by her. She also stated that she had twice confessed to the priest of a neighboring commune, and had spoken her relations with DIONIS, and that he refused her absolution. The priest confirms the fact of the confession, although, of course, the revelations made by the guilty woman have not been brought to light. When again brought before the Magistrate, she attempted to withdraw the statements she had made, saying, "I thought to have lied, my tongue for the sake of religion. Cannot I withdraw my declarations? I myself accept the responsibility of what has been done." The conduct of the priest, however, adds force to the evidence of the witness against him. In the legal investigation commenced he left for Marseilles, taking care to be informed, by means of a woman named PATIN, of the progress of the affair, and so soon as he learned that no accusation against him was likely to result, he returned, and by means of the same person contrived to keep up communication with the accused woman.

The acte d'accusation argues at great length on these facts as proving conclusively the complicity of DIONIS in the crime. The trial is exciting considerable interest, as bearing on the position of priesthood in France.

COMMODORE VANDERBILT.

His Marriage in Canada—How the Gossips were Afflicted—Personal Appearance of the Couple—The Congratulations and the Departure.

From the London (Ontario) Free Press, Aug. 20.

The arrival of Commodore VANDERBILT, the celebrated New-York railway magnate, and party, on Friday morning, was the occasion of quite a flutter of conjecture among the gold seekers and gossips of the Forest City. His every movement naturally attracted observation and excited the most wide and extravagant surmises. Every conceivable purpose, from that of buying up the Great Western, of taking a dip in the modern Pool of Bethesda, the Sulphur Baths here, was discussed with painful gravity. What did he come here for, and what did he want? Had it anything to do with Sir FRANCIS HINCKS? Doubtful! Was it in any way connected with the great corn question, or the inspection of the London volunteers? Not probable, and, indeed, every other conjecture seemed at fault, especially that of a local contemporary in regard to his pursuit of the water cure. The Commodore preserved the most vexatious reticence, even his name did not appear on the hotel register, and he kept in religious seclusion in his rooms, as if under strict medical injunctions to avoid sensitive drafts and the still more afflicting effects of vulgar curiosity. But out little world went to bed, plunged in the best of all its troubles, and forgetful that it gives a fortunate as an eighty million dollar capitalist, with his stocks and his steamers, railroads and river palaces, had even paid us a visit, and still more obliqueness of its purpose.

Early on Saturday morning, however, the great question was answered. It was rumored, however, that the Commodore had merely taken a temporary leave of the respectability and quietude of the most flourishing city of the Dominion to consummate a marriage with a young, beautiful and estimable lady, and thus escape all the glare and heat, the fuss and excitement, the vanity and oppressive state of the New-York fashionable world. And so it came about that at 7 o'clock on Saturday morning, in a private parlor of the Tecumseh Hotel, Commodore VANDERBILT was married to Miss CRAWFORD, daughter of the late Mr. E. CRAWFORD, cotton-broker of Mobile. Ans Rev. W. BRIGGS, Wesleyan minister of this city, officiating at the ceremony.

The gallant bridegroom, whose summers are seventy-six, was dressed in plain black, wearing in his shirt diamond studs of intense brilliancy and great value. He is a noble-looking gentleman, erect in figure, extremely movement, intelligent in expression, and almost courtly in bearing. As may be supposed from the fact of his years, his hair and whiskers are white; but he is so well preserved, even amid all the cares and responsibilities of his position, that he looks to be not more than 65 or 70 years old. His bride is comparatively young, being but 30 years of age. She is of medium height and symmetrical figure, wearing always a singularly-happy expression of face, which is one of gentle beauty. She was dressed in a light silk traveling costume, and wore a blue veil on her bonnet, which was not lowered. The Commodore and his bride are second cousins.

Among the witnesses to the ceremony were the mother of the bride, Mrs. CRAWFORD, and Mr. CRAWFORD, Jr., her brother, and his wife; General BURNHAM and Judge BLAGG, Mr. J. TILLINGHAST, manager of the New-York Central, of Buffalo, and Mr. AUGUSTUS SCHELL, the well-known lawyer of New-York.

After the ceremony had been concluded, the happy couple received the congratulations of the American families and others staying at the hotel, which, by the way, they left at 8 A. M., most cordially, he looking round, she radiant, and both happy. The special car, and the morning express east being ready to start, the party repaired to the Great Western Railroad Station and entered the Commodore's special car, bound directly to New-York City. As the train moved off, a series of twenty-one detonating signals were given in honor of their departure.

Talk of railway rings and stock corners, bulls and bears, hedging and hypothecating, selling short, operations for a fall, Wall-street doings and the Gold-room! More nothing all these compared to the greatest speculation of life, that of matrimony, which the gallant old Commodore has for the third time entered upon. Let us hope that he will enjoy for many years to come an ample "margin" never prove himself a domestic "bear" and avoid all "corners."

Reception of the Commodore and Bride in the General City.

From the Syracuse Journal, Aug. 21.

Immediately after the marriage ceremony was performed, the bridal party, consisting of the Commodore, his wife and a waiting maid, Messrs. SCHELL and TILLINGHAST, came southward in the Commodore's special car, which was attached to the Pacific Express train, reaching this city at 8:15 o'clock Saturday evening. The special car was drawn up on the track in the Bit House, when the Commodore and wife alighted and hastened to the most elegant apartments the hotel contains. This distinguished consideration, as it is called, was paid the particular hotel because of its having been named in honor of the Commodore. The entire party were guests at the Wanderstit on the 23d of June last, when they were the wedding in Niagara Falls, Miss CRAWFORD, now the Commodore's wife, was then accompanied by her mother. During the sojourn of the bridal party at the Vanderbilt, the Commodore and bride were not visible. They closely kept their rooms, where their meals were served, and the veteran was only seen below stairs once, when he got shaved, and, it is added, paid the fortunate barber a fee of $5. It is further gossiped that one was distributed to the waiters of the hotel by his departure. Mr. SCHELL was the purveyor of the party, seeing to all the arrangements for their entertainment and paying all the bills. Curious groups hung about the hotel Saturday evening and Sunday morning. A few persons witnessed the arrival of the party, and quite a large crowd of curiously seekers saw the departure. The Commodore was very lively indeed, and quite graceful and courteous in his attentions to his wife. He is in as good a state of preservation, despite his seventy and three years, as most men at fifty.

The Commodore's special car was drawn before the main entrance of the Vanderbilt, a few minutes before 9 o'clock Sunday morning, the bridal party moved speedily from the hotel to their places in the car, and away sped the locomotive for Schenectady and Saratoga Springs. With a clear track and an incandescent fire, the time to the Springs was made in about four hours. At 1 o'clock the happy pair were comfortably ensconced in their quarters at Congress Hall. The sojourners at the Springs were taken by surprise by the unexpected arrival of the Commodore and bride, for though the current gossip had foreshadowed the marriage, the event was so suddenly precipitated upon the gossip-mongers, who the once were forestalled in their prophecies.

The Lincoln Fund.

Mr. T. G. CHURCHILL, who subscribes himself Treasurer of the Lincoln Monument Fund, gives a very satisfactory explanation of the disposition thus far made of the funds which were placed in his hands for the erection of a monument to the memory of our martyr President. He says:

"A contract was some time since made with H. K. BROWN, one of our most celebrated sculptors and the author of the Washington Monument in Union-square. Mr. BROWN has already finished a plaster cast of our lamented President, which was exhibited to the Committee, accepted by them and sent to the foundry to be cast in bronze, and when finished, as it soon will be, I think it will not only meet the expectations and wishes of the many friends of President LINCOLN, but will add another wreath to the brow of the artist who designed it.

It will, perhaps, quiet the nerves of your anonymous correspondent to know that Mr. BROWN has already received $10,000 on account of his contract, and that the balance of the funds, which amount to about $11,000, is invested in registered United States five-twenty bonds; and, further, that I have studiously avoided having any of the funds in my hands, having requested Mr. JOHN B. ARTHUR, Secretary of the Columbia Fire Insurance Company, No. 161 Broadway, to receive the subscriptions, invest the amount in Government bonds, entering the subscriber's name on a book kept for that purpose, which, by-the-by, is well worth seeing; and if the writer alluded to has ever sent in any subscription list, or has even subscribed and paid his one dollar, he will there find his name beautifully written."

Ballistos.

To restore and retain the bloom and freshness of beauty unimparted, ladies should use BURNETT'S KALLISTOS. For chafing of infants, and for any rough usage of the skin, it has no equal. Unlike other cosmetics, it produces a healthy action of the capillaries. —Advertisement.

PRETTY WOMEN.—A comparatively few Ladies monopolize the beauty as well as the attention of Society. This ought not to be so, but it is, and will be while men are foolish and single out pretty faces for companions.

This can all be changed by using HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM, which gives the bloom of youth and a refined sparkling beauty to the complexion, pleasing, powerful and natural.

No tidy need complain of a red, tanned, freckled or rusty complexion who will invest 75 cents in Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its effects are truly wonderful.

A PACIFIC RAILWAY

GOLD LOAN

We beg leave to announce that we have accepted the agency of the

KANSAS PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.

For the sale of the New Seven Per Cent. Thirty-Year Gold Loan, Free of Tax.

This Loan amounts to $6,500,000,

First Mortgage Land-Grant and Sinking Fund Bonds,

secured upon the extensive lands of the Railway Company in Kansas, by Congress, a valuable grant of 12 million, of which twelve miles are completed, and the road in active operation. It is also a mortgage upon the rolling stock and franchises of this first-class railway now running through the State of Kansas.

And in successful operation for 457 miles west of the Missouri River, and earning already enough to pay all of its expenses and existing obligations, besides

More than the Interest upon this new Loan.

In addition to this, the bonds are also secured by a prior mortgage of the Government Land Grant of three million acres, extending in alternate sections on either side of the track, from the 20th mile post in Kansas to Denver. The proceeds of the sale of these lands are to be invested by the Trustees in the 7 per cent. Bonds themselves, up to 110, or in United States Bonds as A Sinking Fund for the redemption of the Bonds.

The lands embrace some of the finest portions of the magnificent Territory of Colorado, including a coal field and pinery. The Company also holds as an asset equivalent tract of Three Millions of Acres in the State of Kansas, and although not pledged as a security for this loan, their possession adds largely to the Company's wealth and credit. We estimate the Value of the Company's Property, Covered by This Mortgage, at $32,000,000, Net, While the Loan is Merely $6,500,000.

The bonds have

THIRTY YEARS TO RUN,

from May 1, 1869, and will pay

SEVEN PER CENT. INTEREST IN GOLD, semi-annually, on May 1 and Nov. 1, and are

Free From Government Taxation,

the Company paying the tax.

The Principal of the loan is made Payable, in Gold, in the City of New-York, but each coupon will Be Payable in Frankfort, London, or New-York, at the option of the holder, without notice, at the following rates:

On $1,000 Bond in New-York...$35 (gold) each half year.
On $1,000 Bond in London.....$7 1s. 10d. each half year.
On $1,000 Bond in Frankfort...87 florins and 50 kreutzers each half year.

The agents of the loan, before accepting the trust, had the condition of the road, and the country through which it runs, carefully examined. They are happy to give the loan an emphatic indorsement as a

FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT

in every respect, perfectly sure, and in some essentials even Better than Government Securities.

The bonds will be sold for the present at 96, and accrued Interest, both in Currency, the agents reserving the right to advance the rate.

The attention of investors is invited to these well-secured bonds, which we recommend as one of the most profitable investments in the market.

Gold and Government Securities taken in payment at their market value, without commissions.

SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD

FIRST MORTGAGE

CONVERTIBLE BONDS

OF THE

Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company,

OF ILLINOIS,

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD AT THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, NEW-YORK. COUPONS PAYABLE APRIL AND OCTOBER.

FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX.

The Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad, upon which property these bonds are issued, is now in successful operation from Danville, the Office of Division of the Illinois Central Railroad, the length of the road is 19 1-100 miles, the capital stock $1,000,000. The grading, bridging, and all the work upon the road, equal to any in the State, have been ready for a long time, and the whole line is ready for the rails. The cross ties are rapidly being put down, and a portion of the road is now in successful operation. The whole road will be in operation by the October next.

These bonds are convertible into stock at par at the option of the holder, and may be registered in the name of the owner; any time before the date of the coupon attached to the bond, the 1st of October, 1869, is offered in as we shall show, the very best. Already more nearly equal to the total amount of the bonds, has been expended in the improvement of the road. The bonds, averaging less than $14,000 per mile, are secured by a first mortgage on the whole road and entire property of the Company. The road is one of the branches of the Illinois Central, and oldest contract wagon road in the State, passing through several populous towns and cities, and the richest agricultural district in Illinois. It is a direct line to the capital of the State, and the local business alone will suffice to make it a first-class paying road, while with its connections with many principal lines, its through trade must be such as to place it in one of the leading roads in the country.

The road will be consolidated with the line from Danville to Indianapolis, making a line of 210 miles. At Indianapolis connections will be made with all the through lines to New-York and Baltimore; at Danville with the Toledo, Wabash, and Western. In fact, the road will form a main link in the direct connection of the principal Eastern cities with southern Illinois, with Keokuk and Burlington, Iowa, and thence with Omaha and the Pacific.

It will complete a direct line from Boston to Peoria, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Chicago, &c., via Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, and the Bellefontaine Railroad to Indianapolis and Danville, or via Toledo and Wabash and Western Road.

It will form a direct freight line from New-York to the same points West via the New-York Central, Lake Shore and Bellefontaine Roads, to Indianapolis and Danville; or via the Erie, Atlantic and Great Western, to Dayton, Ohio; and via Pittsburgh, to Indianapolis, Danville, Bloomington, &c., as well as from Philadelphia, via the Pennsylvania Central to Harrisburg, Pittsburg, Columbus, Dayton and Indianapolis.

It will form an important line of connection between of Baltimore and the South with the Great West, the Northwest and the Pacific via Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to Harrisburg, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Danville and Peoria.

Thus, with the combined advantages of a certainty of a large local business and a through business, which, as a consequence of the many direct leading and principal lines, it must necessarily be, it is reasonable to present that the earnings of this road must exceed, in proportion to its length, those of any other road in Illinois. The following table shows the earnings of some of the principal railroads in Illinois:

Railroads.	Miles road.	Earnings per mile.
Chicago, Alton and St. Louis	320	$13,600
Chicago and Northwestern	1,132	11,670
Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific	410	10,012
Toledo, Wabash and Western	1,000	7,700
Illinois Central	705	16,118

It is safe to estimate the receipts of the Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin at $10,000 per mile, for the first year at $15,000 per mile, or on 117.00 miles, $1,755,000.

FIRST YEAR.

Receipts, as estimated.....$1,494,000
Operating expenses, as estimated:

Operating expenses, 45 per cent. on $1,494,000	$672,300
Interest on $1,000,000 gold bonds, 7 per cent.	140,000
Premium, 40 per cent. on $140,000 gold	56,000
6th table to Sinking Fund	30,000
	898,300

Leaving a net profit over interest and expenses $595,700 Or over 42 per cent. for dividends on the capital stock the first year of its operation. Without doubt, a very large portion of the earnings each year would be in freight. The geographical location of the road is alone sufficient to convince all of its great value and eventual success.

The stock of the Rock Island and the Illinois Central, the Chicago and Alton, Burlington and Quincy Roads, are all selling at from above par to nearly 200, while none of them are more favorably located, and the competition with other roads, which these have to contend with, is not nearly so great as that which this road will not sell as high as either of the above. Hence the privilege of converting these bonds into stock of this Company at par any time desired greatly increases their value.

After having personally and thoroughly examined this road, we accepted the agency for negotiating the bonds. We now offer them at 95 and accrued interest in currency. With the above facts before you, we present them as a reliable and safe security and profitable investment.

At the present price they pay 10 per cent. currency—gold at par, there they pay a premium of 5 per cent. in Five-Twenty Bonds—besides the advantage of being free from tax, and the prospect of a speedy advance in the stock of the road on completion, into which they may be converted.

Government Bonds and Gold received at their market value in exchange without commission. Bonds forwarded by express free of charge.

All particulars furnished by the undersigned, financial agents of the Company.

CUBA.

Volunteer Fortitudes on the Instalment—Three Battalions for the Seat of War—The Responsibility of the Revolution Buttressing—A Real Cuban Victory—Spanish Official News—Opening of the El Cautino Hospital—Massacre of Cubans.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Wednesday, Aug. 18, 1869.

The Cuban revolution, so often cauterized by the official bulletins of the Spaniards, is increasing in strength and vigor to such an extent as to call forth on the part of the Spanish Press loud lamentations of discomfort and new homilies to the schedule, who are spending their time in noisy debates as to the duties imposed on their position as the defenders of the "national integrity" and speculations as to whether they ought or ought not rush off, horse, foot and dragons, finish up the rebellion, and accomplish the annihilation of the rebels with all the promptness and expedition of a before-breakfast job. At length we have voluntary offer of three battalions to proceed forthwith, or when it shall please his Excellency, to the seat of war, to aid with their well-known valor in the extermination of their motley opponents. The Press is jubilant and chuckle with evident delight at the happy turn things have taken for them. Absorbing to themselves as a natural consequence the whole credit of the manœuvre, which good fortune has crowned with success, they believe, and with good reason too, that the departure of 3,000 volunteers for the seat of war, young, active, robust, acclimated, and with the completest amount of ferocity, to relieve the dull monotony of campaigning as it is understood in Cuba, will prove to the Spanish cause a valuable auxiliary, and to the insurgents by no means contemptible foe.

The Spaniards, awaking to dangers, have at last determined to put forth their strength in one united effort, are straining every nerve to maintain within its present limits the Cuban insurrection, so often "defeated" and driven to "roving bands" of "bandits" and "incendiaries," not taking into account the other various epithets which the Spaniards in their effusive style of complimentary eloquence have variously bestowed upon them. While, however, the Spaniards are wrapt up in a self-complacent contemplation of their own acendrado patriotism, the Cubans are by no means idle, and silently but surely they are making all the preparations which they are capable of to stem the new torrent which threatens destruction to their cause which has wavered along with such varying fortunes for the lengthy period of nearly a twelvemonth. In the Carlist movements in Spain they see a real diversion created in their favor, and sugar the most happy results therefrom.

A CUBAN VICTORY.

Spanish Press have duly chronicled and acknowledged a real Cuban victory, with only a sole qualification; that they do not vouch for the truth of the account. It is not very likely, however, that the Spanish Press would circulate reports unfavorable to themselves did they not possess the possibility and the probability, too, of being true. The account of the affair taken from Spanish sources is in substance as follows:

A train being in readiness to leave Jucaro for Ciego de Avila, Colonel PORTAL, with a piece of artillery and ninety men, left the centre for said point in order to escort it to its destination. On his route he learned that the enemy, to the number of 1,000 or 1,200 men, were in position at the hacienda "Pitrajones," and that, following his route, an encounter would be inevitable. The immense disparity of the forces did not intimidate PORTAL, and he marched on anxious to meet the enemy—in which effort he was completely successful. He fired several discharges of shell, &c., at them, causing great loosing in their ranks. But the number was disproportionate—ten to twelve against one of his own valiant soldiers, whom he harangued to charge at the point of the bayonet. In making this movement it became necessary to pass in front of a thickly-wooded hill from which the rebels who were concealed poured into their flank several close discharges of small arms; Colonel PORTAL falling mortally wounded in one of them, several artillerymen being also killed and wounded. The Spaniards then adopted the wise resolution of breaking up into small parties and regaining the point of their departure, and as the cannon was an impediment to their rapid retrogression it was hastily spiked and concealed in some undergrowth. The convoy should have reached Ciego de Avila according to a dispatch received after the occurrence, having been reinforced by a detachment from Camaji. Other forces which left in the direction of Pitajones, the scene of the encounter, recovered the cannon that had been hidden in the undergrowth. It has not been ascertained whether another encounter took place or not, although it is supposed that the rebels did not remain completely satisfied with the result, as all the soldiers composing PORTAL's party have presented themselves, with the exception of some eighteen or twenty, the greater part of whom are expected to present themselves at the various points in which detachments troops are posted.

This is a Spanish way of telling an unpleasant story. The Colonel, we are told, was killed and "several artillerymen," and the rebels fired cargas cerradas, (close discharges,) and after all this the eighteen or twenty men missing are all, with one or two exceptions, expected to present themselves, "fit for duty, sir," at some of the various points garrisoned by Spaniards. Ah! departed shades of Munchausen!

SPANISH OFFICIAL NEWS.

Some of the rural police of Santo Domingo Parish, on the line of the railroad between Sagua la Grand and Cienfuegos, in union with several volunteers, attacked the insurgents at Melones, killing four, beside capturing some small arms. Another body of Spanish troops had an encounter, the 6th inst., at the Manca farm, in the Rojas Parish, with their enemy, the result of which was four killed on the part of the rebels. The rural police from Vista Hermosa and Placetos fought the insurgents, whom they met while foraging, and killed four of them. At La Guira one Cuban was killed by some Spaniards, who forced the rest of the Cuban party to abandon their camp, leaving fourteen horses in the possession of los Peninsulares. The troops under command of Colonel QUIMOS, (of that family who have for their motto "After God the House of Quiros,") an active Spanish officer, pursued the insurgents and destroyed their camps at Sitio and Gota Blanca, also the intrenchments they had made in the Canyon de los Cocos, near the Caney farm, causing them various killed and wounded. Captain TALAVA, in the District of Cinco Villas, overtook the Cubans at a place called La Sierra and drove them before him, killing five and capturing seven horses.

MISCELLANEOUS.

El Casino Español de la Habana was opened last Sunday night. General RODAS was present and made the opening speech, a short affair, but telling in its effects and pregnant with meaning. According to the by-laws of the Casino, none but volunteers can become members. General RODAS said:

"I take pleasure in complimenting the members of the Casino Español for having happily carried into execution an idea which can become a power in working out good results, and can serve to tighten the bonds of union and affection that should always unite good Spaniards both here and in the Peninsula. The members of this, as well as those of kindred or similar associations, should so conduct their reunions as to avoid political discussions, else their societies may degenerate into political or revolutionary clubs, thereby presenting obstacles to many that would prevent the fulfillment of their

All the above, reduced to vulgar Engliis, meant that the volunteers should obey orders—that Caballero DE RODAS is Captain-General of the Island of Cuba, and means to govern it after his own fashion. The members listened meekly to the address. The President of the Casino and the editor of the Prensa newspaper replied, expressing on behalf of the members their confidence in RODAS' integrity and capacity to carry forward to a successful issue the movements on foot to conquer the rebellion, and assured him his advice would be heeded.

Legion are the reports flying about the town regarding skirmishes and engagements, the victory inclining to both parties, according to the source of the various rumors, from all of which, after sifting the chaff, there hardly remains a kernel of truth, for with tropical rains daily and the thermometer at 90° to 95° in the shade day and night, choices and vomito in camp, operations in the field are not likely to be important.

EATER—SOUTHERN MASSACRE.

In a former letter I forwarded you an account of the arrest of Several prominent citizens of Santiago de Cuba, in which I mentioned that they were "incommunicated." An order was recently issued by Count VALMASEDA providing for their transmission to Bayamo for trial—crime, treason. On hearing that they were to be transferred, they begged to be sent by regular troops, as they were apprehensive of being murdered by the volunteers. This request was, it appears, acceded to on the part of the Commandante of Cuba. The men were sent by an escort of regular troops, and on the road from Manzanillo to Bayamo, between the last-named place and Jiquani, they were assassinated by their escort, who with unparalleled barbarity constituted themselves at once judge, jury and executioners. The account, which is taken from a private letter received here this moment, is regarded as authentic, and I received it after the closing of my letter. I will try and send fuller details of the transaction by Saturday's steamer.

The names of the murdered party are Dr. Jose Antonio Perez, Dr. Raphael Espin, (American,) Dr. Ascencio Espin, Jose Antonio Collazo, Andree Villasena, Bruno Callazo, Salvador Bonites, Manuel Fresnado, N. Minez, (French,) Luis Yero, (French,) and their servants, nine in number, who shared the fate of their masters. QUASIMODO.

TURF GOSSIP.

Changes in the System of Starting Demanded by Owners of Horses—Indignation of Turfmen at the "Vauxhall Decision"—A $20,000 Match.

From Our Special Correspondent.

SARATOGA, Tuesday, Aug. 24, 1869.

The bewildering bustle and excitement attendant on the recent Saratoga race meeting having now subsided, we are able to take a clear review and retrospect of the running there, and the sensational incidents associated with it. The first circumstance that attracts one's attention on glancing over the returns is, the total absence of heat races on the regular programme of the meeting, the only contest of this kind having been a private sweepstakes among owners of horses at two-mile heats, and which was run on the extra or match day of the meeting. Although it is conceded that heat races are more popular with the community than dashes, yet the Association, which is composed of prominent owners of racing stables, who favor short-distance racing, would not yield to the public taste in the slightest degree, and all the contests were dashes. Surely a little concession to the general desire for heat races migh the gracefully yielded by the Executive, and one race at least of this description be afforded on each day of the meeting.

The system of starting by the flag might also be either modified or dispensed with advantageously. The old system of starting by the tap of the drum finds favor with most racing owners and trainers, and although in some of the dashes it cannot well be adopted, yet where the start is from under the string, or the new three-quarter course opposite the judges' stand, it could be advantageously used. The starting in many of the races at this meeting was far from good, some horses obtaining marked advantage over others in the send-off. This was especially the case in some of the two-year-old races, and notably in the last race of the meeting, the Consolation Purse, in which General Duke, who came in a close second, was having his mouth sponged when the starter dropped the flag. That he would have won the race had he got off on equal terms seems scarcely to admit of a doubt. The starter's position is doubtless one which has many annoyances, and his duties are arduous and full of responsibilities, but we believe that they can be far more efficiently discharged by the judges in the stand, who exercise a moral power over the jockeys greater than any private individual or official can possess.

Another subject of just complaint among trainers and owners of race horses is the practice of charging five per cent. entrance to the purses given by the Association. This is the custom at Jerome Park and Saratoga, but the Southern and Western Racing Associations, with a liberality worthy of imitation in the East, make no such tax upon owners. Surely the American Jockey Club and the Saratoga Racing Association, with their princely revenues, do not require the paltry amount derived from this source, and its abrogation would be hailed with general satisfaction by all racing men.

The second day witnessed the memorable race for the Saratoga Cup—memorable in more respects than one. Bayonet won the race, and the stakes were awarded to him, but the judges, believing that one of the conjestants, Vauxhall, had not run to win, deprived the victor of the fruits of his success by declaring all bets off in which Vauxhall was interested. That the judges were actuated by a sincere desire to protect the public from fraud and collusion, and which they showed by ruling off FORD, the rider of Vauxhall, we firmly believe. But in declaring all bets off, after giving the stakes to Bayonet, we think they acted at variance with the clear rules of racing, of justice, and of precedent. If the judges had evidence of the collusion of the party connected with Bayonet with the rider of Vauxhall, then they ought to have withheld the stakes and ruled all parties implicated off the Saratoga Course. If they had not such evidence, then the withholding of bets, after awarding the stakes, is in direct opposition to the rule of the American Jockey Club, which distinctly says that "bets go as the prize or stakes go," except in case of incorrect pedigree or nomination, and which rule is adopted by the Saratoga Association. The judges ought to have been allowed to form their decisions uninfluenced by interested parties, even if the latter were members of the Association. Had they done so, it is hardly credible that they would have come to such a decision as declaring all bets off in which Vauxhall was interested, and that time bets should stand. Very many parties, fancying that either Bayonet or Vauxhall would be returned the owner of the cup, laid odds on the two against the field, yet the judges' decision declares all such bets off. Others, again, backed Bayonet to be first and Vauxhall second, taking the odds about thus placing them, while others, again, backed Bayonet against the field; yet all these bets are void by the judges' strange ruling. A distinguished turf authority, the Turf, Field and Farm, thus speaks of this matter:

"We at all times bow to the decision of the judges, but we cannot but say that they made, in our opinion, a most egregious error. Either Bayonet won the Saratoga Cup or he did not. If he won it, all bets should have gone with the stakes; if there were collusion and fraud, the stakes should not have been given him. I know of many instances where parties backed Bayonet against the field and backed time also. The timing decided the first a draw and the last a bet. Now, time was and is as much a part of the race as any other thing in it, and how can the judges decide that a man must draw, say a bet of $100 on Bayonet against the field, and lose a bet of this same Bayonet time, say one, in the same race? From the reputation of Bayonet and Vauxhall, many thought it would be the fastest cup race ever run, and backed time accordingly. Vauxhall, the judges decide, ran fraudulently, and all bets on Bayonet and the field are a draw; but all time bets must stand. How parties can draw and win, or draw and lose over the same race, I confess passeth beyond my comprehension or any known rules of racing it has ever been my fortune to read."

The same authority speaking at a later date says:

"We have reason to believe that when the official report of the Secretary of the Club appears, it will put this decision in such a light as to be satisfactory to the public."

The high character and distinguished position of the judges preclude the slightest idea that they were actuated by any motive except that of doing the strictest justice and right in the matter, and from protecting the public from robbery and fraud. The names of Governor BOWIE, President of the Maryland Jockey Club; CHARLES WOOLEY, President of the Dorchester Association of Cincinnati; and Senator BAYARD, of Delaware, are guarantees of their integrity and impartiality. These we do not question, but the point at issue is whether their decision in the Saratoga Cup race was or was not in accordance with the recognized rules of racing.

During the Saratoga meeting, a match for the large stake of $10,000 a side, half forfeit, was made between Mr. M. H. SANDFORD's bay filly Dunaye, now two years old, by Lexington, out of Mildred, and Messrs. DENISON & CRAWFORD's famous brown colt Norwegbaard, now three years old, by imported Eclipse, out of Jessie Dixon, dash of two miles, to be run at the inauguration meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club, at Baltimore, in the Fall of 1870.

THE WATER FAMINE.

The Croton Supply Adequate for the Wants but not the Wastage of the Public—Necessity of Economy in its Use.

There is a decrease in the amount of water in the Croton reservoirs, although not sufficient to create alarm among our citizens. If there is no unnecessary waste of water, the supply will be ample for all needful purposes. When we consider, however, that the waste exceeds the actual quantity needed for use by one hundred per cent., as a moderate calculation, it becomes necessary to caution our householders, in order that we may not suffer inconvenience from a lack of aqueous supply during this heated term. The quantity capable of being reservoired, daily, is sixty-million gallons, and nearly this amount is consumed in the City, though at least one-third of it is wasted. The only opportunity for gathering the supply is at night, when the large factories and other institutions where water is used in great quantities are not being operated. It is noticeable that the collection over night is but little more than equal to the consumption by day, so that there is very little chance of a large surplus being reservoired for contingencies. It is only proper that an economical system of using water be established, therefore, or New-York may be reduced to just such a strait as that in which Philadelphia finds itself. We may have a hot and rainless season before us, in which case those who now waste the precious boon will have cause to regret their reprehensible extravagance and carelessness.

Effect of the Scarcity of Water in the Schuylkill—Advance in the Price of Paper—A Fire in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Aug. 24.—Owing to the stoppage of paper mills at Manayunk, which were all run by water power, the price of paper has advanced two and a half and three cents per pound. Some of the manufacturers are arranging to put in steam engines. These mills made fifteen tons of paper daily.

At 9 o'clock this afternoon a fire broke out in a large building corner of Ninth and Wallace streets, occupied by eight or ten different manufacturers. There is no water on the spot, and there is a probability of a large fire.

Rain Statistics for Philadelphia—Small Amount of Water in the Reservoirs.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer, Aug. 23.

As a matter of considerable interest pertaining to the present scarcity of water, we append some information connected with the amount of rain that has fallen during the present and past months as compared with last year and the year 1867. We also subjoin a comparative statement of the amount of rain that has fallen during the first eight months of the years 1867, 1868 and 1869:

From the 1st to the 23d of August of the present year less than an inch of rain has fallen in this vicinity, the exact figures being 980-1000 of an inch.

From the 1st to the 23d of August, 1868, 1.568 inches fell.

During July of the present year 2.865 inches of rain fell. During July, 1868, 3.814 inches fell.

The entire amount of rain that fell from the 1st of January to the 23d of August of the present year was 30.150 inches.

From the 1st of January to the 23d of August, 31.846 inches fell.

From the 1st of January to the 23d of August, 1867, 49.276 inches fell.

It will be observed that during August, 1867, a heavy freshet took place on the River Schuylkill, and during that month 18.675 inches of rain fell.

It will be observed that only 1.728 more inches of rain fell during the first eight months of 1869 than the amount falling during the few remaining days of the present month. It is explained, however, that a great deal less water found its way into the Schuylkill this year than last, in consequence of the parched state of the ground, caused by the want of snow and ice last Winter, and thereby causing an unusual absorption of the rain that fell.

Appended will be found a tabular statement of the amount of rain that fell during the first eight months of the years 1867, 1868 and 1869:

	1867.	1868.	1869.
January.....	1.765 inches	3.820 inches	4.290 inches

THE COAL MINERS.

Why They Should Resume—The Offer of the Railroad Company—The Loss by the Strike.

From the Scranton (Penn.) Republican, Aug. 23.

In urging upon the men an acceptance of the Railroad Company's proposition we believe we reflect the general sentiment of our patrons, and know that we advocate the best welfare of the miners themselves.

The offer of the Company is in plain and intelligible terms, and is the best thing attainable by the men. The advance proposed is forty-seven per cent. over wages paid in May, when the men quit; it is equal to the pay received at any mines in the valley, and consequently all that a basis would secure for them. The Company pledge to continue to give the same price for mining as is paid elsewhere in this valley, which, indeed, was hardly necessary, as we believe they have heretofore invariably done so. There remains, then, as far as the present is concerned, only the name of basis left, and as to the future it is reasonable to expect that the companies will endeavor by fair treatment and satisfactory pay, to keep connected. Shall we, then, have life and activity in our midst, or must this ruinous stagnation continue?

The representatives of the General Council are on the ground to strengthen the men for base. They have levied an assessment of $24,000, which if collected will make a respectable sum of money. But it is not yet in the treasury, or at the disposal of the Council; and if it was, would prove vastly inadequate for the purpose. If it should be collected, and every dollar thereof faithfully distributed among the families of those thrown out of work in the Lackawanna Valley by the strike, they would each get only about $1 where none would be received if work were resumed at present prices. If work should now be commenced at the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company's mines the product would reach 170,000 tons of coal a month in addition to that now forwarded from the Roaring Brook Company's mines. A Diamond car holds about a ton and a half, the price offered for which is $1 31, while in the big vein it is $1 60; although the product of the latter is much the best, calling it the same, would make the average pay for mining ninety-seven cents a ton. To the miner's pay add any fifty-three cents a ton for outside labor, &c., in preparing and putting the coal in the cars for shipment, and you have for labor alone upon one month's product of the Company's mines $85,000 upon 85,000 tons of coal, or $969,000. The other disbursements of this department for supplies, &c., &c., would doubtless swell this sum to $600,000 monthly; while in the transportation department of the Company, and in their car and machine shops, the pay of engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen, mechanics and laborers, now idle, would make from $25,000 to $30,000 more. Eighty locomotives are now housed and out of use, and a large number of men not directly engaged in mining are suffering because of this strike. The disbursements of the Railroad Company, alone, then, must now be reduced $600,000 a month, while those of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company are fully as much more. The present condition of this valley, depicted of the circulation of nearly three-quarter of a million of dollars a month, is anything but an enviable one. For three months already we have boasted this depression, as a business people, with wonderful endurance. The solvency of business houses has been sorely tried, and the hardest blow ever dealt our business circles since 1857, has been suffered, and so far with hardly an exception safely outlived. Can coal miners wonder that we urge a resumption of work!

THE KEROSENE HORROR.

Statistics of Casualties for Eight Months of 1869—Necessity for Immediate Action by the Authorities.

The exposition lately made in the TIMES of the fatalities resulting from the use of impure kerosene has tended to awaken the public to the necessity of immediate action on the part of the authorities, to prevent the great sacrifice of human life and the horrible disfigurements caused by these terrible compounds. In order that the public may fully comprehend the danger which is ever imminent where these are used, we subjoin a summary of the deaths, injuries and losses by fire resulting from kerosene explosions in this City and Brooklyn since the 1st of January last. The compilation is made up from the files of one daily journal alone, and is by no means complete, as many accidents occur from these explosions that never come to the notice of the Press.

From the tabular statement before us we learn that:

For the month of January there were 9 accidents, 4 deaths and 1 serious injury. Damages by fire, as reported, $1,150.

In February there were: Accidents, 8; deaths, 2; injury, 1; reported damages by fire, $7,600.

The record for March is: Accidents, 9; deaths, 3; injuries, 2. Reported losses by fire, $5,650.

For the month of April there is no report.

The casualties for May are: Accidents, 5; deaths, 2; injuries, 5. Losses by fire, $1,155.

The month of June is reported as having 10 accidents; 2 deaths; 3 injuries. Losses by fire, $15,800.

July still further swells the list as follows: Accidents, 7; deaths, 6; injury, 1. Losses by fire, $1,600.

For August, up to yesterday, the record is as follows: Accidents, 6; death, 1; injured, 8 (two now lying at the point of death). Losses by fire, $16,800.

Here we have a total of fifty-five kerosene explosions in seven months, within a radius of ten miles of the City Hall, resulting in twenty (probably twenty-three) deaths, eighteen serious and twelve slight injuries, and an aggregate loss by fire of $48,455, so far as this partial investigation informs us. This is by no means an exact summary of the casualties within the area specified, however. No account is here made of the accidents on Staten Island, where there have been many, nor of those places on Long Island, other than Brooklyn, where the majority of the petroleum refineries are located. Could a complete list be obtained, the sum total of accidents, deaths, injuries and losses by fire would be swelled to at least one-third more. The statement recently made in the TIMES, that the deaths caused by kerosene explosions in this City averaged one per week, is below the actual number. All, or nearly all the kerosene by the use of which these casualties are produced, however, is put upon the market in this City, and hence the necessity that exists for the appointment of a competent officer, whose duty it shall be to test the oils offered for sale, and the vending of which should be forbidden under heavy penalty, unless they have been submitted to his investigation and bear the mark of his approval. When the number and frequent recurrence of these accidental explosions are taken into consideration, it is safe to say that, however appaling are the revelations of the "Kerosene Horror" recently made in the TIMES, they are not equal to its terrible actualities.

Union Republican Central Committee.

An adjourned meeting of the Union Republican Central Committee was held last evening at its new headquarters, corner of Broadway and Twenty-third-street. Mr. SIMON STERNE presided, and Mr. JOHN J. O'BRIEN acted as Secretary. After the calling of the roll and reading, and approving the minutes of the last meeting, an address was made by Mr. KETCHUM, in which, after a brief review of the field of local politics, he accepted the office of President of the Committee to which he was elected at the last meeting. Mr. KETCHUM's salutatory was very well received and frequently interrupted by applause. The special business for the evening as determined at the last meeting, was the election of permanent officers, which was accordingly proceeded with, with the following result: First Vice-President, NORMAN SEBASTOR; Second Vice-President, JAMES A. LUCAS; Treasurer, HUGH GARDNER; Secretaries, THOMAS J. ALISON and DR. EMILE W. HORER.

The meeting then adjourned subject to the call of the Chair.

More Yellow Fever at Quarantine.

Two more vessels have arrived at Quarantine with yellow fever on board, one being the Cuba, from Havana, which had six men in hospital at Havana, two of whom, ROBERT FURNHAM, mate, and a seaman named COYLE, had died. The remainder of the crew came on with the vessel. During the passage the Captain's son, aged 9 years, died of the disease. Two of the crew were taken down with the fever also on the voyage, but they are now convalescent. The Fulda, from Rio Janeiro, which left that port on the 11th of June and put into Hampton Roads for orders on the 23d of August, and sailed thence for this port on the 16th inst., also left two of her crew and her Captain at Rio sick with yellow fever, and three others were prostrated by the disease during the voyage.

The Case of Mr. Aipe.

The charge against Mr. AIPE, of Rankin-street, Newark, of having been the cause of the death of his wife, has been completely refuted by the medical investigation held yesterday. It appear Mrs. AIPE had suffered for years from chronic ill-health. Mr. AIPE had been engaged in an encounter with his apprentice, and had been put into jail, but not for ill-treating his wife. Mrs. AIPE had been perfectly helpless for some time, and owing to his incarceration, she had no one to wait upon her during her sickness. Yesterday evening Dr. DODD gave an order for burial.

Fire in West Houston-Street.

At 5 o'clock last evening a fire occurred on the third floor of a tenement house, No. 200 West Houston-street, occupied by JOHN DONNELLY, caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp. Damage to furniture $300, insured for $1,000 in two City companies. The building is owned by CHARLES RAY and is damaged about $100, insured.

Accidentally Cut Her Throat.

About 6 o'clock last evening, AGNES DILLON, aged 19, of First-avenue and Eighty-seventh-street, while playing on a pile of lumber in Ninety-second-street, fell on a stick of timber and cut a deep gash in her throat. She was cared for by the Police and then taken home.

Reforms in the Public School System—Petition to Introduce the Study of the German Language.

The General Committee of the German-American School Association met at the Cooper Institute last evening, Mr. WILLY WALLACH presiding. There was a very large number of members in attendance. After a very protracted discussion, the meeting adopted a petition requesting the Board of Education to make several changes in the present system of teaching languages in the public schools. The following is the petition:

"That the Board of Education amend that part of section 21 of the By-laws of the Board, which now reads as follows:

"The City Superintendent may also authorize the Latin language to be taught in any grammar school in which the supplementary course is pursued; but the same shall be taught only by teachers employed in the schools to give instruction in other branches of study. The French or German language may be pursued in grammar schools in connection with the studies of the second and first grades, and the supplementary course."

So as to make it read in future:

"The City Superintendent may also authorize the Latin or French language to be taught in any grammar school in which the supplementary course is pursued; but the Latin language shall be taught only by teachers employed in the schools to give instruction in other branches of study. The German language shall be taught for at least one hour daily, by regularly appointed assistant teachers, as a regular branch, in a number of ward schools, to be designated by the Board of Education, which number shall not be less than one-third of the whole number of ward schools in the City. The study of German shall be commenced in the second grade of the primary department and pursued thence through all the grades of the grammar department and the supplementary course."

Also, to further amend section 21 of the same By-laws by striking out in the title the word "German," and in the text the words, "or of the German language, as the Board of Trustees for the Ward may select and determine."

The petition will be presented to the Board at its next monthly meeting.

Homes for Homeless Children.

Notwithstanding the large numbers of destitute boys and girls which the Children's Aid Society have sent West during the past few months, there seems to be no diminution of the numbers who continue to apply for employment and homes. Yesterday between forty and fifty boys and girls were sent West in charge of Mr. J. P. BEACH, to the States of Illinois and Wisconsin. The children seemed quite happy and proud of the transformation which soap and water and new clothes had effected in their general appearance.

New-Jersey.

The market on Mulberry-street in Newark is to be enlarged and improved. Two additional stories are to be added to the present building for a distance extending 500 feet from Mulberry-street, and the building is to be widened so as to cover Canal-street to the rear of the lots on Commerce-street. The second story is to be planned for the accommodation of three regiments, a spacious drill-room and ten company rooms, besides rooms for armorers and others being provided for by the plan. The cost of the proposed improvements is estimated at about $60,000.

Coroner WARREN last evening concluded his inquest over the remains of the man recently run over and killed by a Hudson City car in Jersey City. A verdict in which the Company was censured for its want of proper and adequate accommodations was rendered. The driver, who had been put under $500 bail, was acquitted of blame and released from bonds.

The shoemaker's strike at Newark, which bade fair to become general, would seem to be nearly at a termination. Messrs. GRAFF & HAGG have already acceded to the terms of the men, as also have all the other leading firms. The rest of those who have held out against the men are expected to agree to the demands of the men to-day.

On Monday afternoon a little son of GEORGE DALTON, of No. 36 Bond-street, Newark, fell into a well and was drowned. His body was not discovered for some hours after. The County Physician, Dr. DODD, after ascertaining the facts in the case, granted a permit for burial.

A young man named THOMAS WEMANS was arrested in Newark, charged with having picked the pockets of CHARLES HEIBRIGH, at the Philharmonic Society picnic on Monday. He was committed for trial.

The Essex County Road Board have decided to stop all work on the roads until a decision has been rendered in relation to the suit against them now pending in the Courts.
